A GROWING COMMUNITY

Greenville, North Carolina is a city of 35,000 located in the eastern part of the state. Named after Revolutionary War hero Nathaniel Greene, the city was founded in 1774. Today the southern community is the home of the world's largest tobacco warehouse, the state's third largest university and many new industries.

During the past decade, Greenville has grown with new businesses, housing developments, and public facilities and it continues to grow. The most recent developments include the open pedestrian mall on Evans Street and the completion of the new city park along the river.

As a county seat of a rich agricultural area, Greenville has become a market for tobacco, produce, corn, soybeans, peanuts, and other farm products. Industrial products in Greenville and the surrounding county include textiles, Eveready batteries, pharmaceuticals, brushes, clothing and lumber.

As a city, Greenville has many retail stores and restaurants for its citizens. There are over seventy churches in the city representing more than twenty religious sects. Pitt Memorial Hospital located on the outskirts of the city will be replaced in 1976 with a new 315 bed hospital with an additional wing that will be a part of the university medical school.

Greenville has one daily paper, a television station and four radio stations. Entertainment is provided by three movie theaters, and art center and numerous nightclubs.

The climate in Greenville is usually warm and humid. In the winter the temperature fluctuates between 20 degrees and 60 degrees and in the summer it is seldom below 75 degrees. It seldom snows in Greenville but rain is quite plentiful year round.

The most notable change in downtown Greenville, in the past six months has been on Evans Street, the main street of the central business district. Until August 1975, Evans St. was usually filled with parked cars, heavy traffic and pedestrians. By December the traffic and cars were gone with only the pedestrians remaining. The reason was an open pedestrian mall down Evans St. from Five Points to Third St. The $425,000 mall was the second in a three step plan to renovate downtown Greenville. T.I. Wagner, project manager of the mall said it creates a pleasant and inviting atmosphere for shopping.

During December choirs and choruses from Greenville and Pitt County entertained shoppers with Christmas music. The mall has facilities for group gatherings and displays. Since the completion of the mall, businesses have reported an increase in sales.

Right: Pitt Plaza, Greenville's main shopping center, serves the community with a variety of stores including department, clothing, groceries, hardware, records, stereo equipment stores as well as beauty shop and restaurants.

Greenville merchants sold over $267 million of merchandise in 1974. It is estimated that student consumers of East Carolina spend as much as $15 million for food, clothing and other items each year in Greenville. Students are not only consumers but also employees. Many students work in local businesses for experience and to support their way through school.

When asked about Greenville, many students felt it is "pretty nice for a college town." Some students felt that there was not enough in the way of entertainment. Others contend that Greenville has much more to offer than their own hometowns, yet some students feel the community leaves a lot to be desired. In the words of one student "Greenville is a nice place to be while in school but I don't want to live here permanently."

GREENVILLE, N.C. - HOME OF

In recent years Greenville has become an educational as well as commercial and agricultural city. There are three elementary schools, one junior high and one senior high school. Pitt Technical Institute located just outside of Greenville, has increased its enrollment ten fold in the past ten years.

The most notable institution of higher learning in Greenville is East Carolina University. Founded in 1907 as a teachers training school ECU has become the third largest university in the state and has some of the best fine arts programs on the east coast. The university consists of nine professional schools: Allied Health, Art, Business, Education, Home Economics, Medicine, Music, Nursing and Technology and a college of arts and sciences.

Located in the center of Greenville the campus covers over 600 acres. The 11,000 students add to the community as residents and consumers. As the largest business in the area, the university has a faculty of 800 and employs a staff of about 1,000. Along with the city the campus is also growing. Since 1967 when East Carolina College became East Carolina University the campus has grown with new buildings to meet the demands of the increased enrollment. Tyler Dorm, Minges Coliseum, the Science Complex, Brewster and the Nursing, Home Economics and Allied Health Schools have all been built in the past decade. More recently the Leo Jenkins Art Center, Mendenhall Student Center and an annex to Joyner Library were opened in 1974 and 1975.

In the fall of 1976 East Carolina will expand the school of Medicine to a four year program. The expansion will create new jobs on campus and in the ECU wing of the new county hospital well as increase enrollment.

Riot Erupts In Downtown Greenville

On the night of October 31, 1975, eight students and two policemen received injuries and 57 persons, 30 of which were ECU students, were arrested on charges of failure to disperse and inciting a riot. Damages totaling over $3,000 were done to downtown businesses as a result of the disturbance.

What began as Halloween celebrations ended as a riot which made headlines throughout N.C. and Virginia.

Around 11:00 p.m. Friday the police attempted to disperse a crowd of approximately 400 persons according to Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon. The crowd, consisting of ECU students, local citizens and visitors from other cities, had congregated on Cotanche Street between Fourth and Fifth streets, an area where seven nightclubs were concentrated.

Cannon said an order to disperse was given on the corner of Fourth and Cotanch and the crowd was given five minutes to disperse. Witnesses that were downtown in the area said that the order could not be heard by the crowd.

The Greenville Police first used pepper fog, then tear gas to break up the crowd which overflowed from the nightclubs along Cotanche St. Reports of some witnesses said that tear gas and fog were sprayed inside the nightclubs, forcing the occupants out into the streets.

Cannon reported that 27 persons were arrested around midnight for failure to disperse. The persons arrested were on Fourth, Fifth, and Cotanche streets, and some were even a block and a half away. Many came out of the nightclubs to escape the gas only to be arrested by the police with no knowledge of why.

An hour after that first arrest made by the police, a second crowd gathered. In protest of the arrests, the crowd began throwing bricks and bottles through display windows of businesses along Fifth St. Cannon said 29 persons were arrested and charged with inciting a riot.

Everyone arrested was taken to the county jail and charged with one of the two crimes. Most were released around 6 a.m. however some persons were not released until late Saturday afternoon. The persons were kept on the bus for hours while mace and tear gas was sprayed in the windows according to some persons which were arrested.

As a result of the riot and circumstances surrounding it, the Student Government Association (SGA) unanimously passed a resolution to "investigate the facts" of the riot whereas "the confrontation ... showed a lack of good judgement and responsibility on the part of those involved ... and a degree of hostility does exist between the students and the civil authorities of Greenville." A committee was formed by the SGA to study the riot and to make recommendations to the legislature when the study was completed.

After several weeks of interviewing persons involved in the riot and studying the evidence, the committee made recommendations to the SGA legislature. The recommendations asked: (1) for the removal of Glenn Cannon from the office of Greenville Police Chief, (2) for activities to begin which would improve student-police relations, (3) that all charges of failure to disperse and inciting a riot be dropped, and (4) that an ECU student have a non-voting membership in the Greenville City Council.

In response to the SGA investigations of the Halloween incident, the Greenville City Council met in an open hearing to discuss the riot and the recommendations of the SGA.

It was determined that on the night of Oct. 31, 1975 a riot did occur and damages were done to businesses only after the police had arrested 27 persons for failure to disperse. Some of those arrested testified at the special hearing that a) it was almost impossible to hear the order to disperse over the noise of the crowd and firecrackers, and b) persons were given no outlet by which they may have left the area as the police were everywhere and no one gave any proper directions on what to do or where to go.

City Council members agreed that there was no confusion between the police and the crowd and that in the future fees would be taken to prevent such incidents from occurring. A suggestion was made by Mayor Percy Cox that a town common should be organized for festivities so crowds would not block the streets. The council refused to accept the recommendation regarding Police Chief Cannon and asked the SGA to withdraw it. The council also felt that an ECU student on the council as a non-voting member would increase communication from the campus and the city.

The SGA called for a boycott of the downtown merchants to begin Dec. 9, 1975, however all charges against persons, both students and non-students were dropped and the boycott was not held.

For weeks after the riot, letters poured into the Fountainhead commenting about the riot. Merchants felt that the police overreacted. Some alumni commented on the incident and they too felt that the police overreacted. One student, Bob Tyndall, felt that the riot was a disgrace to ECU students. Tyndall's letter was met with much opposition, as was a letter printed in the University of North Carolina's Daily Tar Heel declaring that ECU has no "class". There was also a letter from the policemen involved supporting the actions of Police Chief Cannon. Some letters criticized the treatment of the incident in the paper. Although only half the persons involved had been ECU students, the Fountainhead, with the SGA, conducted an in-depth investigation, much more thorough than the Greenville Reflector.

After it was all over, and all the cases were dropped, the incident was still not forgotten. Much of the sentiment on campus was that the police had instigated the riot and had overreacted with the tear gas. Downtown the opinions were mixed, some people praising the police for their actions, other condoning and others condemning the actions. There was one feeling which was predominant everywhere and that was that such an incident never happens again.

TITLE IX CAUSES NUMEROUS POLICY CHANGES

ADMINISTRATION

Editor: Susan Bittner

Title IX, the portion of the Education amendments of 1972 forbidding discrimination on the basis of sex, resulted in a flurry of activity at ECU this year as Women administrators worked to evaluate school programs, activities, and policies.

Twelve campus subcommittees worked with the Committee on the Status of Women to bring ECU into compliance with the 1975 amendment guidelines by July 21, 1976. Only Athletics was exempt from the 1976 deadline.

In order to eliminate sex-discriminatory practices at ECU, officials re-examined policies in the areas of admissions, financial aid, housing, employment, counseling, dormitory curfews, and athletics.

One notable change resulting from Title IX was made when campus officials declared that all clubs which meet on campus and receive funds and faculty help must be open to membership to both male and female students. This stipulation caused particular problems for such organizations as Phi Sigma Pi, ECU's all-male honorary fraternity.

Athletics was perhaps most affected by Title IX provisions. According to Dick Farris, assistant director of ECU personnel, Title IX did not require that the university establish a female football team, nor did it require girls to be allowed on athletic teams where physical contact was involved. Instead, the law demanded that there be comparable sports for women students. The law did not demand equal funding for male sports, but it did stipulate that the funds be sufficient for the operation of all sports.

Residence hall policies for male and female students were under examination for possible discrepancies. One difference found was that the women's dormitories had more full-time counselors and administrators than the men's. Another item receiving attention was dormitory curfews. In order to bring uniformity to campus housing regulations, ECU officials may establish a campus-wide curfew and allow dorms to vote for their own curfews.

Title IX legislation was also responsible for changing the abortion loan to an emergency loan so that it could be used by members of both sexes.

A proposal allowing the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus was passed at the fall meeting of the Board of Trustees. The full Board's approval did contain stipulations, however. Among them were provisions that alcohol could not be bought with student fees and that no drinking would be allowed in Minges Coliseum. Another stipulation was that alcohol on campus could not contravene existing federal, state or municipal laws.

The Board of Trustees set up a committee to formulate guidelines for the ECU athletic program. Subjects under consideration by this committee are ECU's affiliation with the Southern Conference, actions regarding any decisions the NCAA may make, and the question of enlarging women athletic programs. (see p. 152)

Also approved by the Board was a revised outline of tenure guidelines. The new policy states that faculty members must be hired on a probationary basis for tenure. Probation periods is now three years for professors and associate professors and five years for assistant professors and instructors.

ECU Students Required to Sign Contracts to Live in Dorms

For the first time in ECU history students were required to sign contracts before being assigned a dormitory room. The signing of the contract, which was necessary for all students with 96 hours or less, obligated students to either occupy their dormitory room for a nine-month period or lose their $60.00 room deposit.

Only students planning to student teach, graduate, marry, or who have medical excuses were allowed to break the contract. Others who were dissatisfied with the contract had to present their case to the ECU Housing Appeals Committee.

According to Housing Director Dan Wooten, the contracts helped to maintain a higher rate of dorm occupancy. This year alone occupancy increased three percent and resulted in a gain of $30,000 for the year. The money went back into the general housing fund for dorm maintenance, improvements, salaries for residence hall personnel, and monthly dorm rent payments.

"The contract allows us to take care of more students in a nine-month period, and maintain a lower rent," Wooten said.

"Room rent would probably have increased if the dorm had not been filled during winter quarter," Wooten added. Under the present contract system, room rent will remain the same as long as dorm expenses do not increase more than five percent. The last rise in rent occurred during fall, 1974 when the $5.00 laundry fee was phased out as a separate expense and incorporated in the total room rent fee.

Students have complained that they had no input in the contract system. Commenting on this lack of student participation, Wooten said, "Last year when we were introducing the contract to the Board of Trustees, we had several students on the housing committee review it. These students did not have input into the contract as such, but they did see a rough draft of it. There were no objections from the students on this committee."

"The only thing the contract has done for the Administration is to bring on more work. We are supporting it because it will be better for the student," Wooten added.

School of Allied Health and Social Professions Expands

ACA.

The Speech and Hearing Clinic was relocated spring quarter into new facilities built behind the Allied Health Building. The new structure is in addition to several mobile units which have been installed on the Allied Health campus.

According to Dean Thiele the School of Allied Health is not only expanding in physical facilities but also in programs and course offerings.

A B.S. program in Health Sciences with a concentration in statistics was to begin in the fall of 1976. The curriculum committee approved a new sequence of courses on alcoholism under the Division of Health Affairs. Another sequence of courses was also approved by the committee for the graduate level of administrative services.

The school has employed a Ph.D. specialist, Dr. Paul Mihne, to help departments adapt to a competency-based curriculum.

Dean Thiele looked forward to a lot of cooperative activity with the Medical School which is to open in 1977. Thiele said a "harmonious relationship shall exist between the two schools."

Several students responded to a survey sent out by the BUC-CANEER staff concerning the various departments the student was involved with or majoring in.

Jim Brayn an Environmental Health major feels the relaxed atmosphere of the department aids in the learning process. "The wide range of course study is of the best quality." Jim goes on to comment that "the professors are fairly competent and that they have good methods of teaching." Jim is an Environmental Health major because he feels it is a necessary major and one in which much can be accomplished. "It is a needed course of study in the U.S. and is becoming more so every day. The need is even greater in underdeveloped countries where disease is ever prevalent.

Two students, Sandra Small and Clarinda Kolody majoring in Social Works and Corrections responded to the survey. Miss Kolody replied the "close communication among the professors and students, especially the professors take time to encourage the interactions. I honestly believe the professors and students strive to maintain these one-to-one relationships of which they are extremely proud."

Miss Small agreed saying the thing she liked best about the department was the human relations aspect. "The instructors are very helpful and are always willing to listen and hear what you think and feel."

Both students feel that they are getting a quality education with very competent professors. One complaint of Miss Small was that the course tends to be boring when the students learn alot of theory with no practical experience. According to both students, the professors that expect and encourage student discussion are better classes because they learn more from other students as well as the faculty member.

PHYSICAL THERAPY LABORATORY

ACAD.

The School of Allied Health and Social Professions received an award of $26,892 to enlarge the BS degree program in environmental health from the U.S. Public Health Service.

According to Dr. Trenton Davis, chairperson of the department, the funds will be used to equip and furnish a laboratory which will function as a teaching facility. The ECU environmental health program is the only accredited undergraduate program in the field in North Carolina and one of only seven fully accredited programs in the nation.

A grant of $62,000 was awarded to the department of Social Work and corrections to support an off-campus program of professional social work education. The fund was from a Title XX grant. The N.C. Department of Social Services awarded the department of Social Work $145,257 to continue the development of its social work curriculum.

The School sponsored the Second annual Research Symposium spring quarter. The School wide conference included guest speakers. The school also sponsored with the Pitt County Mental Health Association a lecture by Dr. Darold A. Treffert a visiting Psychiatrist from Wisconsin.

Mrs. Ledonis Smith Wright, one of the first black professors at ECU was found in the Tar River on June 19. The cause of death was accidental drowning. She was an associate professor of Community Health in the School of Allied Health and had been at ECU two years. A native of Rockingham, Mrs. Wright worked closely with programs to benefit minority students.

There has been much progress made at the ECU Medical School, according to Dr. William E. Laupus dean of the school. The accrediting officials were very positive in a February visit.

The consultation visit requested by the medical school was an informal visit of the committee so suggestions and comments could be made concerning future progress according to Laupus.

ACAD.

"The visit was one of several that we will have," said Laupus. "There is a standard procedure for achieving accreditation. First there is a consultation visit. When the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME) feels we are ready they will conduct a site accreditation visit.

"After the site visit the committee will make a presentation to LCME which meets about four times a year. The LCME will make a recommendation for provisional accreditation and will set a date to open the school and establish the number of students to enroll."

"The provisional accreditation rating is standard for all medical schools," said Walter Shepherd, assistant to the dean. "All new medical schools receive provisional accreditation until they graduate their first students. After that the LCME will conduct another visit and then determine final accreditation."

"The consultation members were quite impressed during their recent visit. We had progressed much further than they had thought we could since their visit last year," said Shepherd.

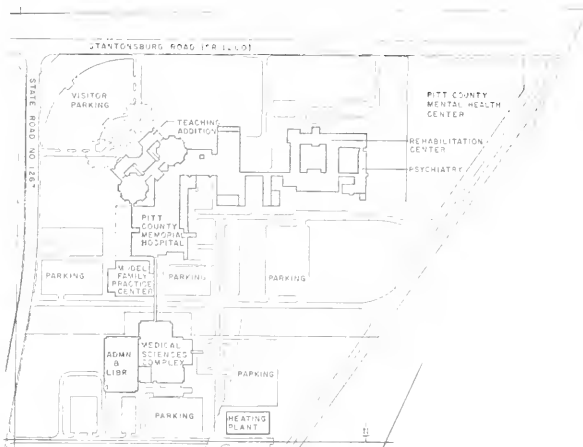

"There are three areas which must be completed before the site visit," said Laupus. "These are the residency training program, our doctorate (Ph.D) program and faculty recruitment. The consultation staff found the facilities quite adequate."

"We had to receive special permission to establish a PhD program as the University of North Carolina Board of Governors had placed a moratorium on all program expansion."

"Since ECU did not have an existing program we had to wait until the Board of Governors would approve it before we could establish a program. The approval came in their recent meeting.

"All medical schools must have residency programs. Our first residency program which will be in family medicine should be approved in the summer of '76," said Laupus.

ACAD.

"Once the residency program has received accreditation it will be possible for us to provide practicing doctors within a year," according to Shepherd. "We have had inquiries from residents who would like to finish up their final year in our program.

"We have hired approximately half of the necessary faculty and expect to have the remainder hired by early summer," said Laupus.

"Because we had a one year program we had a staff of 13. All of those people will be teaching in the new medical school. However we need department heads for each of the 13 department and additional faculty for those departments.

"As these department heads will also be chiefs of staff in their particular area at Pitt Memorial we have had to work with the hospital and local physicians in recruiting the doctors," said Shepherd.

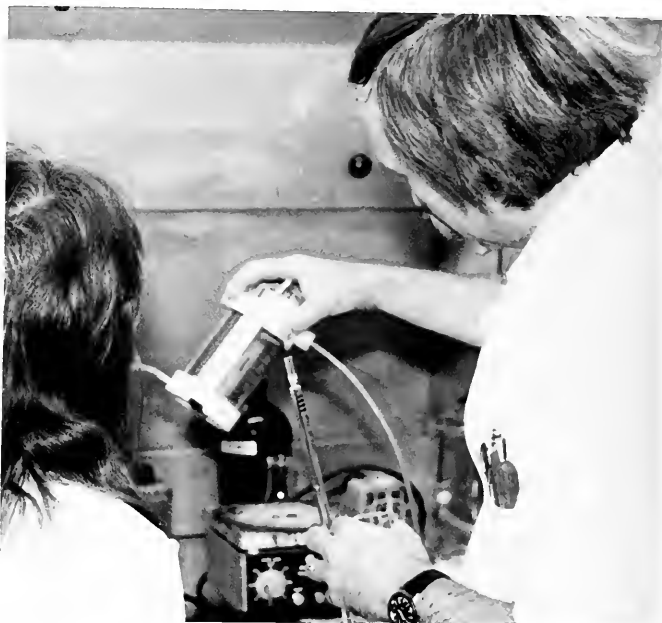

"We will also be using faculty from Allied Health and the School of Nursing for the teaching program."

In the basic sciences six faculty members have been hired. Dr. David L. Beckman, from University of North Dakota School of Medicine has been appointed as Professor of Physiology.

Dr. Edward M. Lieberman from Bowman Gray School of Medicine has been hired as an Associate Professor of Physiology. Dr. R. Frederick Becker, a noted anatomy professor from Michigan State will also be on staff. Dr. John Yeager, also from Michigan State, will be an assistant professor in Physiology.

Dr. Alphonse J. Ingeniot, an associate professor of pharmacology from the Albany School of Medicine, and Dr. Thomas M. Louis, an assistant professor of anatomy from Oxford, will be on the staff.

New Faculty Hired for Medical School

Dr. Wilhelm Frisell from the New Jersey School of Medicine will serve as head of the biochemistry department and the assistant dean of the graduate program.

In the clinical departments Dr. Jon Tingelstad will work in pediatrics and Dr. James L. Mathis from Richmond Medical College will be head of the Psychiatry department.

The curriculum for all the departments has already been established and the consultation committee saw no problems according to Shepherd.

Facilities for the medical school are nearing completion. Pitt Memorial hospital is expected to be completed in December of '76.

"We may be ahead of schedule as far as completing facilities," said Shepherd. "Ragsdale, the Science Complex and part of Whichard Annex are the areas on main campus that will be utilized by the school for teaching. In an agreement made in December 1975 with Pitt Memorial Hospital it will be a teaching hospital.

"In the future a Medical Science building is expected to be built near the new hospital and all offices will move there, but that will not be for another three years," said Shepherd.

"When the school is opened we will be able to offer more services to the people of eastern North Carolina. Not only will we be producing more doctors for the state but more physicians will be willing to set up a practice near a medical school and teaching hospital."

"When the legislature gave us the $43 million it was stated that our medical school would train doctors in primary care such as family and internal medicine, pediatric, obstetrics and psychiatry.

"This medical school is here to help the people of eastern North Carolina by providing them with necessary medical services and with more doctors for the entire state," said Laupus.

CAD. Nursing Offers Twelve Month Practitioner Program

For the first time, the School of Nursing, began a twelve month practioner program. Designed for registered nurses, students spend two days a week on ECU campus, and three days in their hometown. Also started in the fall is a new course for physical assessment for undergraduate students. This incorporates aspects of the nurse practioner program. Eventually, the nurse practioner program will be incorporated in undergraduate and graduate programs rather than continuing as a separate program. The School of Nursing has contracts with the Eastern Health Evaluation Center and other educational centers to provide 28 counties with continuing education programs through workshops, seminars, and other types of courses. During the Fall quarter 1975, the school conducted 44 programs.

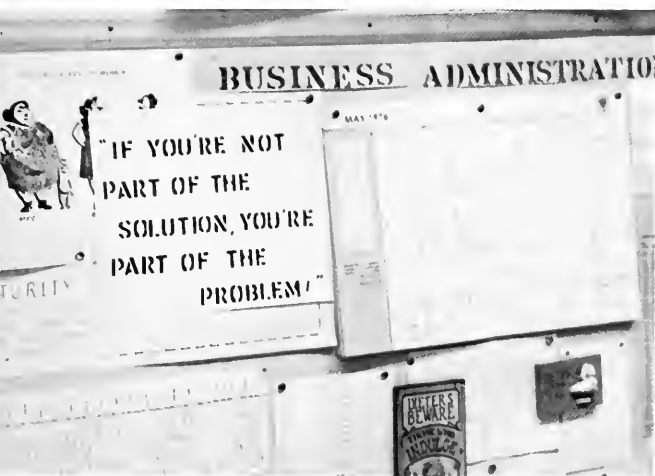

ACAD.

An educational grant-in-aid of $5,000 was given the School of Business by the DuPont Company. The award was used to enrich ECU's graduate program in business administration. Similar amounts awarded by the DuPont Company in past were used to establish graduate fellowships and support faculty research.

The E.A. Thomas, Jr. Accounting Scholarships were awarded to two juniors, Mary Lou King and Robert G. Brinkley. The scholarships are awarded from a fund established for outstanding ECU accounting students by E.A. Thomas, Jr. of Myrtle Beach, S.C.

In a response to a survey, Susan W. Long, faculty member of the School of Business, commented that, "ECU gives an outstanding undergraduate degree in Business and a perfectly fine MBA," however, "For the academically or research oriented student ECU is weak." Jack W. Thornton, Associate Professor in the Department of Economics, felt that one of the problems facing ECU is "the increasing class size that has been brought on by record enrollments at a time when, financially, we have been unable to increase the number of faculty."

School of Education — Largest Program for Teacher Education in State

154 SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

DR. DOUGLAS R. JONES, DEAN
SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

"We have the largest program for teacher education in the state," said Dr. Jones, dean of the School of Education, and he continues, "we are continuing to develop a competency-based program."

"Our master's programs is divided into specific areas. We have a master's in elementary education and intermediate education as well as secondary and we are working on a masters program in adult education for people in community colleges and technical schools."

"Our early childhood majors will also be certified in reading. We are the first in the state to do this in an effort to emphasize reading on the elementary level," said Jones.

"Special Education majors will also be doubly certification in the undergraduate level as they will be certified in learning disabilities and mental retardation. We have also began a new program where student and faculty volunteers work with gifted children on weekends. This is a step towards a teacher education program for the gifted."

Through the Division of Continuing Education, the School of Education offers a large number of classes and seminars in eastern North Carolina for principals, superintendents, supervisors and teachers recertification.

Dean Jones is hesitant about changing over to the semester system as it interferes with student teaching. "We will have to work very hard to maintain the quality of teacher education because we will probably have to cut down on the range of courses. I don't believe the semester system is as good as the quarter system for student teaching as it will be a cut from 10-11 weeks to 8 weeks or less.

Home Economics Offers Undergraduate Dietetics Program

Research activities and course offerings continued to increase in the School of Home Economics.

According to Dean Miriam Moore, Vila Rosenfeld, chairman of the home economics education department, used grant funds from the U.S. Office of Education and the American Home Economics Association to develop a curriculum program in food service occupations.

Working with grant funds from the ECU Division of Health Affairs and H.E.W., the Department of Foods and Nutrition concentrated on developing a coordinated undergraduate program in dietetics. Students currently must have a masters degree or internship experience to become a dietitian.

Five new courses appeared in the Department of Foods and Nutrition during the year. These included courses in special problems, dietetics, child and maternal nutrition and obesity, and food management.

For the first time last fall, the Department of Clothing and Textiles equipped a room for testing fibers under temperature and humidity control. Also new in the School of Home Economics was the establishment of a materials center for working with handicapped children. Funds for this materials center were given to Dr. Ruth Lambie as a result of her "Pockets of Excellence" project.

Dean Moore also announced the School of Home Economics was enclosing several corridors in order to provide office space for those faculty members previously located in the second floor of Wright Auditorium.

Pre-school Labs Prove Rewarding

Ann Dale Gay of Goldsboro, a teacher in the Wayne County Head Start Program, is the first North Carolinian to receive the Child Development Associate (CDA) credential under a new program sponsored by East Carolina University.

The program is co-sponsored by the ECU School of Home Economics and the ECU Division of Continuing Education and is one of 18 established in eight southeastern states, with funding from the U.S. Office of Child Development.

Awarding of CDA credentials to qualified workers in day care and child development centers is done through the Child Development Consortium, a private, non-profit corporation representing 42 national associations with direct interests in early childhood education and child development.

Thirty-four persons received CDA Credentials last July, from pilot programs throughout the nation. Mrs. Gay is the first recipient of CDA credentials in the southeast associated with a child development center not designated a pilot program. Previous CDA's in this region were awarded to interns in a South Carolina pilot program.

CDA credentials, now primarily available to Head Start personnel, will ultimately be open to any qualified employee in a child care operation. Candidates for the credential are evaluated by a team consisting of a trainer, a parent-community representative, a CDA Consortium representative and the individual candidate.

According to Allen Churchill, director of ECU's Head Start Supplementary Training and CDA Programs, other Goldsboro Head Start workers are working toward CDA credentials.

The nationally-recognized CDA credential is a professional award earned on the basis of demonstrations of competency in various aspects of child development after a specified period of full-time experience with groups of young children aged three to five.

Technology Offers Cooperative Education

Over 350 students were enrolled in the school of Technology. Consisting of two major departments, the school has 19 faculty members which instructed courses on industrial technology, business education, office administration and distributive education.

Dr. T.J. Haigwood, dean of the school, reported the transfer program from community colleges was operating quite well. He also felt that the change to the semester system would have no problems for the school to adjust to.

Dr. Douglas Krauger received a federal grant for $30,000 to continue work with cooperative education program. In such a program students receive academic credit for working for an industry. The jobs must be related to a student's major and the school must approve the job before credit can be received.

Michael Covington, a junior in the school, and Paul Waldrop, an assistant professor, attended a conference about ocean-derived energy. Oceanographers, biologist, researchers, and civil engineers attended the conference held at N.C. State. Covington and Waldrop were conducting research in the area of wave energy.

Students and Faculty Exhibit Artwork Throughout Country

In addition to exhibitions in ECU's Kate Lewis Gallery and the Mendenhall Student Center gallery, the School of Art and ECU is well represented in art exhibitions throughout the country. Art faculty as well as art students represented ECU in the exhibitions.

The design department in the School of Art was extended this year. About ten new courses were added. It is now possible for a student to concentrate in crafts, textiles, weaving, jewelry, and crafts within a design major. In September 1975, a drawing minor was initiated in the school.

Ranked about 60 in the nation, and one of the best on the East Coast, each year the school sees an improvement in the quality of its students. ECU art students represent many states and foreign countries.

Charles Chamberlin, associate professor and chairman of ceramics in the School of Art has been named to the 1975 "Who's Who in American Art." On May 14-15 1976 a workshop, "A Fiber and Fabric," was sponsored by the school for persons interested in handcrafted textiles.

Francis Speight, artist-in-residence and recipient of numerous awards including the Max Gardner Award for a faculty member has contributed to humanity, retired at the end of spring quarter. Speight, one of the most celebrated painters of North Carolina has been at ECU for 15 years.

Music School Holds Clinics for High Schools

The second-floor of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center has a new audio-visual system which will allow a faculty member to supervise the practice of three students simultaneously. The system has been in the works for three years and is just one of several changes within the School of Music.

Recently the pedagogy program has been expanded with emphasis on children pedagogy. Gregory Nagsdage, a specialist in piano pedagogy, was one of five new faculty members hired within the school.

The school of Music sponsored several clinics for high school students. Over a thousand students attended the Choral Festival in February bringing together 20 choirs.

A Band Clinic, also held in February brought students from over 40 different schools. During fall quarter Band Day was held in which marching bands from North Carolina and Virginia competed.

Mr. A.J. Fletcher of Raleigh brought the National Opera Company production of "Cinderella" to ECU Spring quarter.

Also in spring quarter the school sponsored a Fine Arts Festival.

Due to the increase in music majors the school is having to restrict enrollment in various areas as there is not enough room in performing groups. The school has 373 enrolled music majors, with 61 graduating spring quarter.

Musicians Perform in Operas, Concerts

Three musical versions of the love life of the beloved Shakespearean character Sir John Falstaff and a whimsical portrayal of life among the Greek mythological deities in "An Evening of Operatic Comedy," was presented by the East Carolina University Opera Theater Feb. 5-6.

A cross section of "Big Band" jazz was performed by the East Carolina University Jazz Ensemble at its fall concert Wednesday, Nov. 5, in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

Directed by George Broussard of the ECU School of Music faculty, the 20-piece ensemble presented a variety of selections including:

Count Basie's "Switch in Time," composed and arranged by Sammy Nestico; Stan Kenton's "Lonely Boy," composed by Dee Barton; a Bill Mathieu arrangement of "The Meaning of the Blues," featuring bass trombonist Tom Shields; Woody Herman's arrangement of Herbie Hancock's "Watermelon Man;" a Stan Kenton-style ballad, "I've Never Been in Love Before," Robert Curnow's "Passacaglia," a jazz composition written in the Baroque form; and Les Hooper's Grammy nominee, "What Have They Done to My Song, Ma/," a rollicking arrangement which combines big band jazz and ragtime.

AMERICA REVISITED 1 HOMECOMING

Students participated in a salute to America and the Bicentennial during Homecoming week with the theme "America Revisited."

The traditional festivities of decorations, pre-game parade, crowning a queen, and victory celebrations were combined with something new, including a concert, a movie on the mall, an art exhibit, and post game entertainment.

"We tried to have something for everyone," said Diane Taylor, Student Union President and co-chairman of the Homecoming Steering Committee. "The theme selected was designed to capture the spirit of America and to create an interest in the past and the present." The committee of student, faculty and administrative members planned one of the most successful Homecoming celebrations in the history of ECU.

Fraternities, sororities, and many campus organizations were busy many weeks before Homecoming planning activities, designing floats, and sponsoring Homecoming Queen contestants.

Keeping with the theme and the idea to have something for everyone, many aspects of entertainment were offered during Homecoming Week.

Fine Arts were represented as both artistic and dramatic works were presented. Several paintings by Chancellor Jenkins were on display in Mendenhall during the week long celebration.

Monday evening the Royal Shakespeare Company performed "The Hollow Crown" in Wright Auditorium. Sponsored by the Theatre Arts Committee, the famous company related the life of the Kings and Queens of England through readings.

Musical entertainment was provided Tuesday evening with female vocalist Linda Ronstadt in concert. Andrew Gold, the Goosecreek Symphony, and Ms. Ronstadt performed to a sellout crowd in Minges Coliseum in what has been called "one of the finest concerts ever at ECU."

On Wednesday, "Escape to Movie Orgy" was viewed by hundreds of students on the mall. Sponsored by the Schlitz Brewing Company, the movie consisted of film clips of movies, tv shows, cartoons and commercials. Feelings of nostalgia prevailed for the entertainment of the fifties and sixties.

Below Left: The joining of the east and west with the Transcontinental Railroad was the theme of the Sigma Phi Epsilon float which also represented the meeting of East Carolina and Western Carolina Universities.

Below: With one second remaining in the game, the scoreboard shows the result of the exciting Homecoming game as the Pirates defeated the visiting Catamounts 42-14.

The Cheerleaders and the Marching Pirates formed a line on Thursday evening. Starting from the girls' high rise dorms, the spirited leaders and their followers marched across campus and up College Hill where a large assembly formed in front of Belk dorm. Chancellor Jenkins, Coach Pat Dye, and the senior football players delivered rousing speeches to the crowd with promises of a victory over the Cata-mounts of Western Carolina.

Friday afternoon brought despair as rain began with little hope of clearing up for the weekend.

Miss Black ECU Eliminated, Black Candidate Wins Crown

Unlike two other universities in the state that crowned males at Homecoming, East Carolina remained traditional and crowned a female Homecoming Queen. A change did occur however as the steering committee eliminated the Miss Black ECU contest. In the past Miss Black ECU had been crowned at half-time with the Homecoming Queen. The committee felt that one Queen was enough and suggested that the Society of United Liberal Students (SOULS) should enter a candidate in the major competition rather than hold their own. SOULS followed the suggestion and entered Jeri Barnes, a sophomore from Goldsboro, N.C. Ms. Barnes captured the title and became the first black Homecoming Queen at ECU.

Prior to Friday the week had been bright with sunshine, and temperatures were in the sixties and seventies. Groups decorating floats and houses had to compete with the wind and the rain late Friday afternoon. Many decorations suffered damage from the weather as temperatures dropped to the low forties and the rain became increasingly worse.

Despite the weather the Homecoming Parade was held Saturday morning, although it was delayed an hour. Consisting of 15 floats, several bands, and drill teams, the Homecoming court, and some parade horses, the parade was viewed by a few hundred students, faculty, alumni, and Greenville citizens.

Organized by the Greeks, the parade was one of the largest in recent years and depicted many aspects of American history through floats and music.

The main event of the week, the game between East Carolina Pirates and the Western Carolina Cata-mounts began at 1:30 Saturday afternoon. The game ball was delivered to Chancellor Jenkins by two ECU alumni skydiver who landed near the center of the field despite overcast sky.

In the first meeting between the two teams in ten years, the Pirates made this Homecoming a memorable one by defeating the Cata-mounts 42-14. The delight of the 15,000 spectators was not diminished by the frequent showers during the game.

To aid with the victory celebrations after the game, the Student Union sponsored a musical carnival in Mendenhall. Featuring various types of music from hard rock to bluegrass and sounds of the big band era, the professional and local bands provided atmosphere for clogging, square dancing, and waltzing. The musical carnival drew a large crowd and contributed to the overall success of Homecoming as it offered something to students, faculty, and alumni in the way of entertainment that appealed to everyone.

Ike and Tina Turner Cancel

Six hours before show time the Ike and Tina Turner concert scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday in Minges was cancelled. Official announcement was made late Friday afternoon after the Major Attractions Committee learned that the performers were not keeping the contract. According to Bob Seravia, committee chairman, the concert was scheduled to begin at 8 and last approximately two hours, however the performers planned to send their band to begin the concert. Ike and Tina Turner would appear later and then do only a 15 minute show.

We cancelled the concert with the interest of all concert-goers in mind. We felt it would be in the best interest of all to cancel the show rather than have any hard feelings regarding its quality.

Many students unaware of the cancellation went to Minges Friday night where they were met with a refund. This was the second year in a row that the major Homecoming concert had been cancelled, and students were not pleased with a second cancellation. However, once students realized the reason for the cancellation by the committee, they were understanding to the situation.

Non-Credit Programs

Non-credit programs are a major part of the Division of Continuing Education and covers a wide variety of topics. Everything speaking, French, and from speed reading to public speaking, French and Russian to beginners piano and preparing for parenthood were taught in 1975-76. Students range in age from seven to seventy with many retired persons as well as young graduates taking part in the courses. A successful course taught spring quarter was Gourmet cooking which appealed to many women in the community. Young people enjoyed a course in guitar from Michael Thompson when men went out for the baseball officiating course. According to Steve Alexander, director of non-credit services, all that is needed to have a class is ten people. Continuing education will find an instructor and a place to have the course.

Extension Campuses

Special Programs

Steve Alexander is also director of Special programs sponsored by the division. These include workshops for high school and college students as well as for professionals. Workshops and seminars cover various fields. The largest took place in Winston-Salem and involved over 2000 elementary school teachers. Another annual project that brought people from all over the country was the Tyron Palace Symposium at New Bern. Historians and antique dealers traveled hundreds of miles to the former capital of North Carolina. Other workshops included a journalism workshop, a librarians conference and a sports medicine seminar.

Community Service

On the community level the Division of Continuing Education offers a speakers bureau listing all faculty members that contribute to the program and the various topics that can be covered. A special bicentennial program called "Great Decisions — 1976" organized community groups for discussions of various topics such as foreign policy.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR EVERYONE

If you were to attend all the entertainment on campus brought by the Student Union, athletic department, drama department, or even the downtown bars then there is no way you would have many spare nights to sit around and do nothing. But it is unlikely that anyone would want to attend every form of entertainment on campus because performers and performances are brought to please a variety of tastes.

In looking over the year, these few things come to mind:

The ECU drama department did not have its biggest season this year but that cannot be blamed on the actors, directors, etc. The fault lies with the plays themselves which were not of as high a quality as those plays of past seasons. One of the most exciting things in the drama department was their bringing of the professional group, The Acting Company. This company put on fine performances most notably, The Robber Bridegroom, a bawdy but fun play.

The Student Union enjoyed a good year with a variety of entertainment including concerts, lectures, and art shows. Hats off goes to Diane Taylor, president, for making things appear to students to run so smoothly.

In conclusion, entertainment on campus seemed to go on somewhere every night. But still there are the same old complaints. The entertainment is there, you just have to look to find it.

Friday free flicks provided entertainment as well as controversy for students. Sponsored by the Student Union, the movies featured such recent hits as "The Sting," "Chinatown," "Paper Moon," and "The Great Waldo Pepper." Controversial movies included "Last Tango in Paris," "The Devils." Most of the well known flick were shown before a full house for two showings. Last Tango ran for two days with a good crowd at every performance.

Besides the Friday Free Flick, classic and international movies were shown on Wednesday nights. These included a Clark Gable film festival, the Little Rascals, Superman, Vincent Price, The Misfits, and the 1934 version of "Lost Horizon." International pictures included "Z."

Special Concerts Offer Folk-Rock Performances

Special concerts on campus served to bridge the gap between the coffeehouse and the major attractions, according to Daniel Pravette, chairman of the Union's Special Concerts committee. Major problems included finding the right bands and getting the publicity out to the students. Before booking any group the committee listens to the group's music on record or in person if possible.

According to Pravette, response to the concerts was fairly good even if attendance was not as high as expected. He feels the response by the students is going to improve as they realize they are missing good music.

Special concerts included Susan and Richard Thomas whose style is much like the Carpenters on November 7. The Thomases have released one album, "A Burst of Life," which was selected as a Billboard pick of the week. Tom Rush, a folk singer, performed on November 11 at Wright Auditorium. Although he has released several albums and is well-known in the country-rock world, attendance was low. Another folk-country-rock band, Morningsong performed on February 5. Like the Thomases their record "Listen to a Sunrise" was a Billboard selection.

In Concert:
Taylor and Ronstadt
"Roll 'em Easy"

Linda Ronstadt and James Taylor performed to large crowds at the Minges Coliseum on the 15 and 26 of October.

Ms. Ronstadt was accompanied by Andrew Gold, her lead guitarist, and the Goose Creek Symphony. Gold introduced her, followed by Goose Creek warming up the crowd with over an hour of entertainment.

When Ms. Ronstadt arrived on stage for the Homecoming concert, the crowds cheered. She performed her hit song "Heat Wave", and several other numbers including "Desperado," "Faithless Love," "Love Has No Pride," and "Silver Threads and Golden Needles."

James Taylor in a one-man show, sung to a much more subdued yet enthusiastic audience than Ms. Ronstadt two weeks earlier. ECU was one of the few stops on the tour of the continental U.S.A.

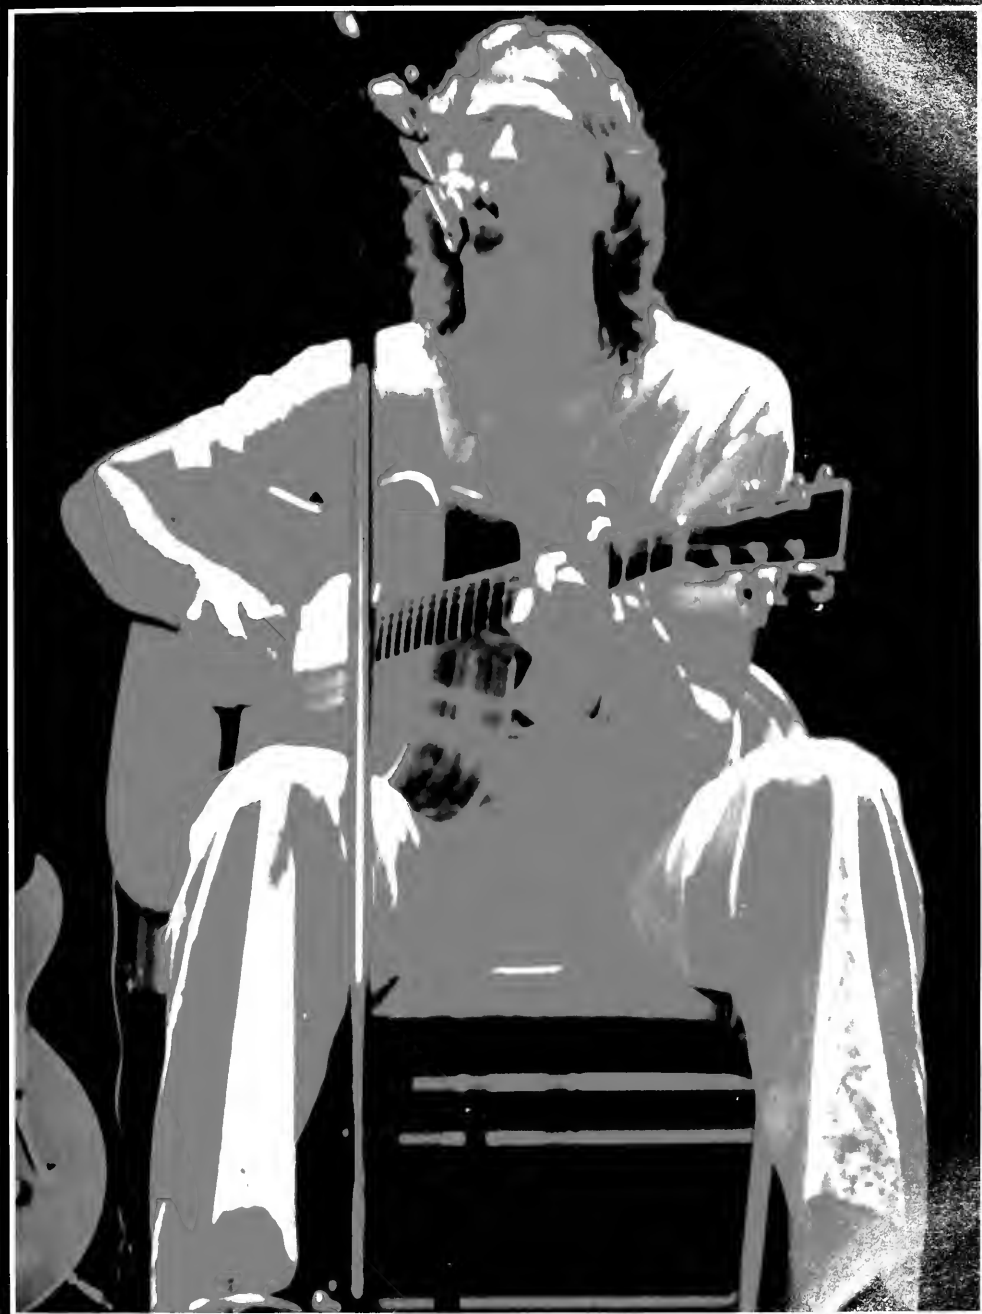

Since most of his band was currently on tour with David Crosby and Graham Nash, Taylor went on a solo tour using only pre-recorded Taylor harmonies for backup.

Most of his concert consisted of Taylor playing the acoustic guitar and he used an electric guitar and piano for just a few numbers.

Taylor sang such hits as "Fire and Rain," "Carolina on My Mind," and "You've Got a Friend."

ACT.

During March a variety of concerts were on campus ranging from electric rock 'n roll to solo melodic guitar. Performances included Leo Kottke and Joe Cocker with Styx and Skyhooks.

Brought by the Student Union Special Concerts Committee, Kottke played his Martin 12 string guitar to a fairly full Wright Auditorium. Kottke entertained the crowd with his fine playing as well as a sarcastic monologues. He played such songs as "Louise" and "Yesterday is Gone." Fans of easy-listening music delighted in the performance.

And rock 'n roll fans were pleased with the Joe Cocker concert, most notably with Styx. This group playing out of Chicago brought the crowd to its feet, dancing and clapping. Of the three acts this band was the only one to receive an overwhelming cry for encore.

Playing before Styx was Skyhooks, Australia's number one rock band on their first U.S. tour. The band was dressed in bizarre costumes as part of an act which featured a light show and fireworks.

Joe Cocker seemed to be anti-climatic after Styx's enlivened performance. Much of the crowd at Minges left at the opening of Cocker's show. Cocker himself somewhat inebriated, seemed questionable as to whether or not he would be able to sing. After several numbers backed by an extremely capable band, Cocker straightened up and delighted the sparse audience with such songs as "I Get By with a Little Help from My Friends" and "Give Me a Ticket for an Airplane."

Music lovers of all types got their share of concerts from jazz to classical. Sponsored by several Student Union Committees, the performances ranged from Monte Alexander's jazz to Kyung Wha-Chung's classical violin.

Monte Alexander's Trio brought traditional jazz to ECU with their October twenty-eighth performance. The Paul Winter Consort performed February 19 with music to please all concert-goers in that they were a cross between symphonic and free-form music.

An internationally known pianist, Murray Perahia, performed on March 10. He is the first American to win the prestigious Leeds International Pianoforte Competition. Following Perahia, another classical musician, Kyung Wha-Chung played on campus. Her violin concert captured the audience who repeatedly called for an encore.

Mezzo-soprano Jan de Gaetani originally scheduled to perform in January appeared in Mendenhall Theatre on April 6. Like Perahia and Chung she is internationally known and brought professional entertainment to campus.

Artist Series: Variety of Classic Enjoyment

ACT. First class performing artists entertained East Carolina students and Greenville citizens through the efforts of the Student Union Artist Series Committee. In October the committee presented two groups, Lorimer and Zukerman and Tashi. November brought the New York Brass Quintet to campus.

Lorimer and Zukerman, a male, female combo gave a classical guitar and flute concert on October 9. Eugenia Zukerman is regarded as one of the finest flutists in the world and Michael Lorimer as one of the greatest classical guitarists.

Tashi brought four of the country's most prominent young instrumentalists to ECU. The group included pianist Peter Serkin, violinist Ida Kavafian, cellist Fred Sherry, and clarinetist Richard Stoltzman. Tashi, Tibetan for good fortune, performed on October 30.

The series continued on November 10 with the New York Brass Quintet. The group is the only ensemble of its kind that perform regular concerts. Their unique sound involves a new perspective on Renaissance Chamber music.

The 1975-1976 series is dedicated to the memory of Charles A. White, a longtime supporter of the Artist Series.

In reviewing the entertainment on campus for the year, the first thing that comes to mind is the Special Concerts Committee of the Student Union. Their hard work in search of a variety of entertainment produced the finest quality concerts of the year which included Leo Kottke and Morningsong. Leo Kottke's performance has been called the most outstanding one-man show on campus for 1975-76.

Not to be forgotten is the Major Attractions Committee which brought three well-known names to ECU — Linda Ronstadt, James Taylor, and Joe Cocker. Of these concerts, the Ronstadt concert had to be the most popular, Taylor the most relaxed, and Cocker the least attended. The low attendance at the Joe Cocker concert which included the more crowd-pleasing Styx, cannot be wholly blamed on the concert itself but on its timing — between winter and spring quarters when lots of students were at home.

If not for the old faithful Friday Free Flick, a lot of folks on campus would have little to do on the weekends. The Student Union Films Committee brought fine movies to campus including Chinatown, Paper Moon, Last Tango in Paris, and American Graffiti.

Not to be forgotten are all the other Student Union Committees which brought lecturers, major classical musicians, coffeehouse singers, art shows, dancers. In these categories two names come to mind, Paul Winter Consort and Rondo Dance Company. The Paul Winter Consort was not only well attended but was attended by a wide variety in the audience from the very young to the very old. Rondo Dancers worked in the classroom as well as on stage and put on a fine performance mixing old and new.

Mystics and Politics Subjects of Lectures

Several political and entertaining speakers were on campus during fall and winter quarters. Jerry Paul, the former defense counsel for Joanne Little met with students on January 15 to discuss a class action lawsuit against the city of Greenville regarding the Halloween riot.

Also on that day Bennie Roundtree, a member of the local Southern Christian Leadership Conference spoke at memorial services for Dr. Martin Luther King.

In another political lecture on October 22, Bob Katz presented his views on the "truth" about the murder of John F. Kennedy.

On the entertainment side, Mr. Zodiac presented his program "A Journey Into the Mind" on September 17. Mr. Zodiac made many predictions of personal, national, and international interest. On December 11, Gil Eagles, a psychic, entertained students with his demonstrations of extrasensory perception.

Ordinarily lecturers tend to talk on the same old ideas and issues. But the Student Union Lecture Committee went out of their way to bring unusual speakers to campus.

Noel Neill, best known for her portrayal of Lois Lane in the popular "Superman" films appeared on campus in January. She described her experiences with the series, answered audience questions, and showed clips from Superman movies. Several people from the audience came on stage and acted with Ms. Neill.

On March 18, Stanton Friedman spoke on "Flying Saucers Are Real." He is the only space scientist in the Western Hemisphere known to be devoting full time to UFO's. "After sixteen years of study and investigation, I am convinced that the evidence is overwhelming that Planet Earth is being visited by intelligently controlled vehicles from off the Earth," said Friedman.

W.C. Fields was recreated on campus by Murray Solomon, impersonator of the great comic genius. "An Evening with W.C. Fields" was a full program which incorporated some of the classic comedy material that helped establish Field's reputation.

On another entertainment note, Gene Cotton appeared in concert on March 24. His music has been called the music of the people and he is known for his easy-going manner on stage. His appearance was courtesy of the Special Concerts Committee.

Award Winning Theatre: "The Hollow Crown" and "1776"

One of the world's best known repertory companies and the winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award and Tony Award for best musical were on campus as a part of the Theatre Art program under the Student Union. "The Hollow Crown" and "1776" highlighted the 1975 portion of the theatre arts series.

ACT.

"The Hollow Crown" performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company on October 13, was a collection of speeches, poems, and songs, of the kings and queens of England. The style of the presentation was dissatisfying for much of the audience as they continued leaving throughout the performance. The actors read the material and the audience was provided with a brief outline of their lines.

The company itself is a distinguished group brought to Eastern North Carolina and ECU by the permission of the Governors of the company at Stratford-Upon-Avon, England.

Highlighting the theatre portion of the bicentennial at ECU was "1776". Winner of many awards, the musical attempted to capture the wit as well as seriousness of the country's forefathers. The action centered on John Adams and his efforts to persuade the Congressional delegates to declare America free from British rule.

The play is by Peter Stone with music and lyrics by Sherman Edwards. The ECU performance on December 8 at Wright Auditorium included many from the original cast.

The Prize Winning
Musical Celebration of America's Bicentennial

Music & Lyrics by Sherman Edwards

Book by Peter Stone

An original musical and a modern comedy marked the first playhouse productions of 1975-76. "The Flight Brothers" and "Who's Happy Now" opened the play season with questionable scripts but fine acting.

"The Flight Brothers," a new musical by Bill Ries, Hub Owen, and Frank McNulty, was mildly received by the ECU-Greenville audience. The play, written to musically and historically portray the lives of Wilbur and Orville Wright, was called poor to inexcusable by local reviewers. It was the script and music, not the actors or the directing which was criticized.

Sandy Miller and Rodney Freeze played the Wright brothers. Their performance was supported by Barbara Richardson as their sister, Katherine and Dan Nichols as Charlie, the Wright repairman.

Plans for the play included a summer run and hopefully, Broadway, but these ideas were put aside after the poor reception at ECU. Performed in McGinnis Auditorium, the play ran from October 28-November 1.

Following what could be termed the "October disappointment" the playhouse produced Oliver Hailey's "Who's Happy Now." This modern comedy concerned a bizarre boyhood in Texas. Cast in the key roles were Constance Ray, Mick Godwin, Rosalie Hutchins, Terry Pickard, and John Robbins. Their actings were extremely fine and sensitive claimed reviewers. This claim was supported by the audiences as the Studio Theatre sold out for the entire seven-day run. The play was December 10-13 and 15-17.

'The Contrast' Adequately Titled

ACT.

Reviewed by Sue Ellen McCloud

Royall Tyler's play, "The Contrast", if nothing else is adequately titled. The play is an entire plot of contrasts which vary in method, presentation, and context. The opening prologue creates a medium for the contrasts which is maintained throughout the production.

One particularly delightful medium Tyler employs for his contrasts is found in the music and lyrics of Don Pippin and Steve Brown. The conception of colonial Americans singing their "hearts' desires" to the rhythm of the cha-cha and the old soft shoe is ridiculous to the point of hilarity. One of the better scenes using this technique occurs between Jonathan, Dan Nichols, and Jenny, Mary Ann Franklin. The two servants become acquainted in the parlor of a proper colonial home, and by the end of the scene, perform a hoe-down on stage.

The costumes, designed by Carol Beule, gracefully reflected the contrasts between the flamboyant social vanities of the continent and the practical colonists.

The quality of the production as a whole was found lacking, with definite problems in unity and characterization. There were some notable performances, however, given by Rodney Freeze, in the role of Jesamy.

The play lacks unity and does not flow as smoothly as it could. With this lack, and the low level of character work, the comic episodes worked well, and the result was a very entertaining show.

ACADEMICS — College of Arts and Sciences

Colleges of Arts and Sciences since 1969 and a professor in the Department of English, reported that because of the conversion efforts, there was a moratorium on all new courses. According to Dean Capwell, committees in all departments worked to meet the fall, 1977 deadline for the switchover. Responses by faculty to the conversion have been varied, but overall professors have been enthusiastic over the prospect of having more time to spend in teaching their courses.

Major developments within the College of Arts and Sciences during

According to Dean Capwell, enrollment in the College of Arts and Sciences remained stable overall, with some increase noted in the Department of Foreign Languages.

Some highlights of 1975-76 in the College of Arts and Sciences were a series of seminars on environmental topics by the Biology department; a panel discussion on Unidentified Flying Objects by members of the physics and English departments; a panel discussion of women in literature by English faculty members, and women in foreign literature by faculty in Arts and Sciences was the replacements of Col. Earl D. Bruton with Lt. Col. Ronald F. Henderson as head of the Department of Aerospace Studies, Dr. Robert E. Cramer with Ennis L. Chestang, as the chairman of the Department of Geography. In the Department of Chemistry Dr. Donald F. Clemens served as the acting chairman for Dr. Robert Lamb who was granted a one-year absence.

In the Department of Foreign Languages seven Saudi Arabian students completed an intensive, specially-formulated six-month program in the English Language. Dr. Joon Ho Kim of the Mathematics faculty completed a lecture tour of his native Korea, and Dr. Donald Lawler, chaired a seminar on Kurt Vonnegut at the Modern Languages Association's national convention in San Francisco.

The Department of English suffered a great loss when two professors died in less than two months. Paul Farr died in Las Vegas, Nev. over Christmas holidays and Russell Christman died as a result of a car accident in February.

AEROSPACE STUDIES

Cadets in the AFROTC program worked to serve the campus and the community, according to Lt. Col. Ronald F. Henderson, head of the department.

Over $3,000 was collected for the March of Dimes by ECU cadets in a March-a-Thon. The AFROTC Drill team marched in the Pitt County area to raise the funds. Cadets also sponsored a blood drive for the community.

Five cadets received two-year scholarships under the AFROTC program. They were David Ruffin, David Koponski, Jack Bradley, Gary Beachum, and Timothy Frazier.

Eight students were recognized for being Distinguished Military Cadets. According to Col. Henderson the awards is the most important received by cadets. Recipients included Glenn Harmon, Gary North, Kerry Bowers, Roy Rogers, Leonard Smith, Scott Murphy, Deborah Baker and Eugene Powell.

Cadets Responsive to Teaching Methods

Enrollment in the four year program which includes twenty-one girls, has doubled according to Col. Henderson, and efforts are being made to improve the quality of the students recruited. Col. Henderson feels that his students are motivated but he has a problem of getting students to improve their average. "Students are definitely more serious and interested than before. Because of this we need to continually improve our courses."

Cadets are responsive to teaching methods used in the department according to responses from the faculty. "After getting over the initial shock of active participation, the students' response is quite favorable," said Capt. Ashley Lans who requires oral reports in his class. "Because of this I have noticed a definite improvement in students' confidence, communicative skills and overall performances."

Capt. Richard Rowan commented that students also respond well to seminar classes and are serious and motivated. Capt. Allen Tinkham also agreed that students were receptive in class. None of the faculty members felt there were any major problems within the department, however Col. Henderson felt the student-advisor program could be improved.

Col. Henderson returned to active duty in 1976 after serving a year as chairman of Aerospace Studies. He replaced Col. Earl D. Bruton Jr. who retired in 1975.

Symposium on Science in Court

Chemistry Professor Dr. Donald F. Clemmens was appointed interim acting chairman of the Department of Chemistry as of December 1, 1975. Department chairman Robert C. Lamb requested a leave of absence from his administrative duties beginning with the Winter quarter, 1975. Lamb will return for the 1976-77 school year. The department sponsored a symposium on the role of scientist in a court of law in April.

Research reports by two of the departments chemists were accepted for publication in scientific journals during the year, also.

Biology Students Attend Seminars

The Department of Biology was well represented in biological seminars and conferences throughout the country this year. Students and faculty members attended conferences and seminars as far away as San Diego, California and New Orleans, Louisiana. While in attendance at the conferences, ECU faculty and student biologists prepared papers and other reports on their research. Several grants totaling $186,000 were awarded to the Department of Biology.

The department sponsored a series of seminars on environmental topics last fall. An increase in enrollment in the department is due to the ECU School of Medicine. The med school has provided more areas of research and more course offerings. Many biology students and faculty members are working on regional problems in water pollution, beaches, and maritime forest.

Rondo Dance and The Acting Company Instruct Students

Members of the Rondo Dance Theatre and The Acting Company appeared on campus for three days giving public performances and instructing drama classes.

The Rondo Dance Theatre appeared winter quarter and instructed students in the rapidly growing dancing program. A third faculty member, Michelle Minett, began teaching dance fall quarter, since dance has become a new major within the department.

The Acting Company performed three Broadway plays including the Tony-nominee "The Robber Bridegroom." Brought to ECU as a cooperative effort by the National Endowment for the Arts, the N.C. Arts Council, the ECU Foundation and the SGA, actors of the company instructed advanced acting classes.

Black drama students performed "Purlie" winter quarter in cooperation with a Black Theatre Symposium.

Five major productions, including an opera, were performed during the year. The "Flight Brothers" premiered fall quarter as the first show of the season. A musical about the Wright Brothers, the play will be performed at Kitty Hawk in the summer. Following "Flight Brothers" was "Who's Happy Now," "The Rimers of Eldritch," and "The Contrast." "La Traviata," Verdi's masterpiece was produced by the Drama Department and featured students in the School of Music. (see pages 84-91)

Author in Residence Retires — Ovid Pierce to Reside at Plantation

By Rudy Howell

For Ovid W. Pierce, writer-in-residence at East Carolina University, retirement means the return to a long-lost love the country.

"Part of my sense of well-being depends on my life outdoors," explained Pierce, who admits that he finds it hard to live in an urban atmosphere.

After teaching at Tulane and Southern Methodist Universities, Pierce joined the English department at ECU to teach courses in creative writing and the novel.

His career in writing began as a painful but necessary experience, recalls Pierce.

"It's an apprenticeship that you've got to serve," said Pierce. "Writers have to serve an apprenticeship just as other performers do."

During his tenure at ECU, Pierce has had three novels published. "On a Lonesome Porch" was published in 1960, "The Devils Half" in 1968, and "The Wedding Guest" in 1974. In 1969 he was awarded the North Carolina Award for Literature.

"I was naturally oriented to the Southern field," said Pierce, who said he admired the works of Eliot Glascoe, James Boyd and Junior Pedican while at Harvard.

When asked about his plans for the future, Pierce readily admits looking forward to his reunion with the country.

"The country means a lot to me. I'm happy to get back and refresh contact with the world," said Pierce, smiling.

When Pierce is not writing, he usually is engaged in some kind of work around the "Plantation," his home, which he has restored to its original colonial design.

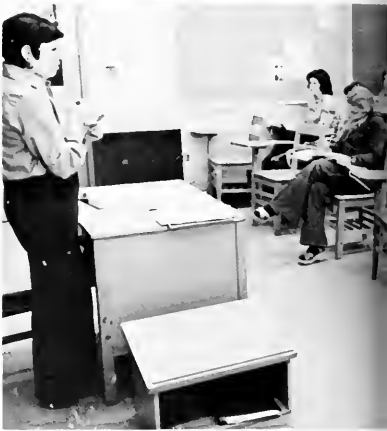

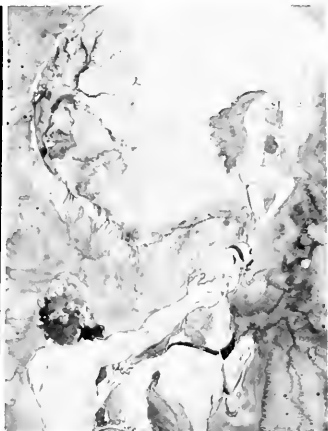

"The 'Plantation' enables me to increase my own sense of awareness," said Pierce. "The exposure to the open world is important for me as a writer."

When asked for one word to describe his experience at ECU, Pierce chose "rewarding."

"One of the most rewarding experiences of my career was teaching. Sometimes, in later years, indirectly, you get the effect of the influence you've had. Those things mean a lot to you," said Pierce.

"Our only comfort is knowing we did what we had to do and did it with our best energy," said Pierce. "The pleasure is sometimes in the doing itself."

Retreat Successful

The second annual retreat of undergraduate, graduate and faculty members of the English department was a great success. Over forty attended the two-day beach retreat and several positive actions resulted. One was a departmental newsletter published bi-monthly by the English honor society. Another was monthly meetings at the home of faculty members. The meetings enabled students and faculty to get to know one another outside the class room on an informal basis. Another suggestion was under study was the possibility of opening a student-faculty lounge. A group also made proposals for course topics for the seminar classes.

A symposium fall quarter discussed women's roles in literature, as characters and as writers. The response to the symposium was overwhelming. In spring quarter topics of two seminar courses centered around women, as they were portrayed in literature and the literature written by women.

A new course offered winter quarter, Classical Mythology, will become a regular course in 1977. Open to all majors, students studied mythology as portrayed in literature art and music as well as being a religious and scientific topic.

Dr. Sally Brett, a graduate of Florida State, began teaching English and journalism courses fall quarter. Two faculty members, Mrs. Mary Sorenson and Mrs. Erma Glover retired spring quarter.

The English department also lost two professors winter quarter — Paul Farr from illness and Russell Christman in an accident. Students organized and presented a memorial service spring quarter for the two which was attended by both families and over fifty people within the department.

Language Students Win Awards in Dionysia Drama Competition

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures is one of the first departments at ECU to take advantage of the ECU Cooperative Education program. Through the program, three language majors were given traineeships or internships with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Washington D.C.

French, German, and Spanish majors won high awards in the annual Dionysia Drama competition at Clemson University during the Spring. The ECU department of foreign languages hosted a symposium on Women in International Literature, The International Festival, and the Eighth Annual Latin American Symposium during the year. A series of Saturday classes in German and Russian were sponsored by the department for Greenville school children.

The faculty was quite active in outside work, as faculty research flourished during the past year. Publications including books, articles, and short stories with some being facilitated by research grants were accomplishments of the faculty's research. Dr. Nicole Aronson of the department addressed an international gathering of French teachers and scholars in New Orleans in January. Her talk was published in a special bicentennial issue of the French Review in May 1976. Professor Thomas A. Williams had a new book published which deals with the occult literature.

Foreign Languages

The success of the program probably overshadows the other services of the Department of Geography. However, all services of the department are valuable to its 135 majors. The department operates a Map Library which included over 40,000 maps produced by United States government agencies. The maps include nautical charts, topographic maps of the United States Geological Survey, and maps produced by the Defense Mapping Agency. Career counseling is a special service offered to students to advise them on different courses in Geography. Students interested in special areas of geography are contacted and informed about the job requirements in their special interests.

Dr. Ennis Chestang, chairman of the Department of Geography, adressed a session of the Association of American Geographers in New York on April 15, 16, 1976. Professor James Stembridge represented ECU in the first annual conference of the Coastal Society, a new organization dedicated to the wise use of coastal environment. The conference was held in Washington, D.C.

Geology

Due to the trend in resources and environmental research more students are going into geology. Dr. Michael O'Connor, chairperson of the department notes that there are more majors than in the recent past. "Because of the national interest there are more job opportunities than before," said O'Connor.

Dr. Jean Lowry has noticed an improvement in the quality of students within the department and sees the seniors as being much more motivated than in the past.

There has also been an increase in the graduate program and a number of students working for an M.S. degree are working on projects on coastal North Carolina. Dr. Lowry feels that the graduate students have gained self-confidence and "there is no holding them back." She feels the success of the students "is largely due to what the students have perviously learned in my college's courses."

The department had a very successful retreat to Nags Head in March. Over 40 students attended and geologists from Illinois, Texas, Florida and Virginia attended as guest lecturers.

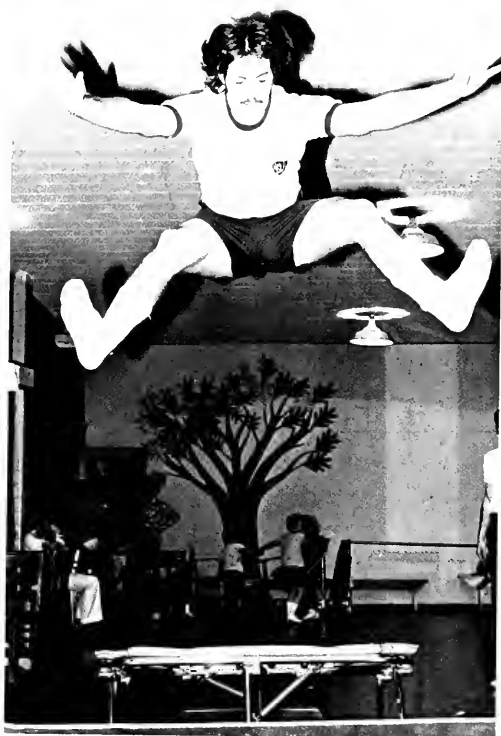

Dr. O'Connor feels there is a very close relationship between the seven faculty members and the students within the department both on a professional and social level. The social relationship was exemplified on the retreat and at the spring picnic.

Charles Winkler, a geology major agrees with Dr. O'Connor. "In my opinion the geology department is one of the best on campus ... the best aspect being the excellent relationship between students and faculty. The faculty is willing and available to work out any problems the students may have.

Four geologists — Dr. O'Connor, Richard Mauger, Scott Snyder and B.A. Bishop received $4,000 grants by the Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources.

Physical Fitness for Faculty Members Offered Health and Physical Education

A physical fitness program for East Carolina University faculty and staff members was sponsored by the Department of Health and Physical Education during spring quarter. The activity, coordinated by Richard A. Lauffer, involved one-hour classes at noon each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday in Memorial Gymnasium. ECU gymnastics coach Stevie Chepko was the director for a gymnastics program for children which was also sponsored by the Department of Health and Physical Education.

The Driver and Traffic Safety Education Division of the Department of Health and Physical Education received a grant of $101,400 from the Governor's Highway Safety Program Office for the Driver Education teacher certification project.

The Drug Education Program received two grants totaling $78,696.

Alvin A. Fahrner

Dr Alvin A. Fahrner (Right) has been one of the students favorites at the university. He was recipient of the Robert Jones Teaching Excellence Award in 1972 and has received high marks on all student evaluations. His classes are so large that some students have to be sent to other classes.

Fahrner lectures his classes as they are usually too large for discussions. "I would like very much to be able to teach smaller classes, not that I mind working for my pay, but because I could give more individual attention and could vary my teaching method." Despite the large classes, Fahrner feels that students accept his teaching very well.

His outlook on ECU is encouraging as he feels the university "will continue to prosper as the years go by, and will gain prestige with age. Fahrner has enjoyed his association with the students of East Carolina and hopes to continue his relationship with students for several more years.

History

Two Graduate Students — Recipients of Brewster Award

For the first time two graduate students in history at East Carolina University have been named recipients of Brewster scholarships for the same year.

The 1975-76 Brewster Scholars are Stephen M. Russell of Kinston and Phillip Stanley Skeen of Winston-Salem.

In addition to being named Brewster Scholars, both Russell and Skeen hold teaching fellowships at ECU.

The Brewster award, carrying a

$1,000 Stipend, is the highest recognition of scholarship in the ECU Department of History. Recipients are chosen by a committee on the basis of proven scholarship and potential.

A department official said both Russell and Skeen ranked "unusually high" in the top two per cent nationally on the basis of Graduate Record Examination (GRE) scores.

The Brewster Scholarships were established in 1972 by Dr. Lawrence

F. Brewster, retired professor of History.

Eleven history professors attended the fall meeting of the Association of Historians at Methodist College in Fayetteville. Dr. Fred D. Ragan appeared on the program and Dr. William N. Still served as president. The spring meeting was held at ECU.

Library Expands

The department of Library Science with an increasing graduate enrollment each year went through an expansion program on the second floor of the original Joyner Library building almost doubling their floor space.

An entirely new heating and cooling system along with new classrooms, student lounge, and faculty offices made it possible to better provide for their two graduate degree programs and a certification program at the undergraduate level.

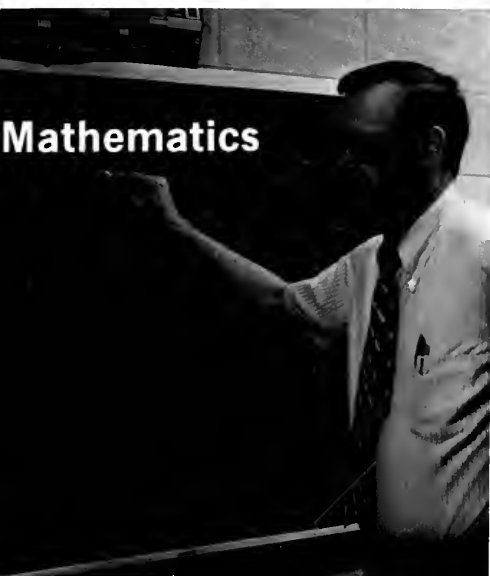

New faculty were added to help prepare librarians/media coordinators for community colleges and technical institutes, senior colleges and universities, public libraries and school media centers.

Dr. Gene D. Lanier, chairman and professor in the department (Top Right) completed his term as president of the North Carolina Library Association.

A summer federally funded institute was held for librarians from three states as well as several one-day workshop covering problems in the profession were well attended. More and more people are now entering this exciting profession as the "information explosion" continues.

Professor Receives Grant of $1875

Fifty-nine majors in the mathematics department were instructed by 25 full-time faculty members. Dr. John R. Crammer of Clemson, S.C. joined the department fall quarter as an assistant professor.

Dr. Lokenath Debnath, professor of mathematics was awarded a grant of $1875 by the Marine Science Council to support a study of problems related to natural hazards such as hurricanes, tornadoes, thunderstorms, and earthquakes.

In response to a survey both Dr. Milam Johnson and Frank Saunders felt there has been little if any change in the quality of students during the past decade. Both men also believe that mathematics majors have good job opportunities. Dr. Johnson sees the outlook of ECU as being good whereas Saunders sees it as getting brighter. However, Saunders has encountered a problem at ECU: "the waste of time in committee meetings listening to radical liberals trying to change and neutralize our administrative authority.

The faculty of the physics department are concerned with the energy problems the nation is facing according to Dr. Byrd, chairperson. Several faculty members are working to develop solutions such as exploring ways solar energy can be used domestically.

Within the curriculum the department developed major areas for undergraduate students to concentrate in for several quarters.

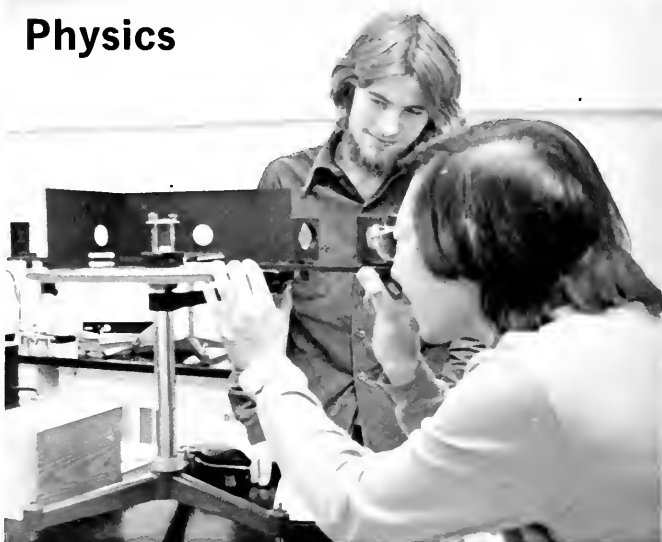

New equipment has been added in the accelerator laboratory to compliment the present data acquisition system.

The department created a cooperative program with area high schools to develop a resource center here at ECU. The center maintains an audio-visual library, an equipment lending program and sponsors in-service programs for secondary teachers. The department also sponsors workshops on the metric system and energy programs for school teachers.

Dr. Loren Winters was added to the faculty to bring expertise in the area of atomic physics and acceleration.

New Programs Developed

New programs are in the works in the Political Science department. A minor in international relations was approved and a Bachelor of Science in Political Science has also received approval. The B.S. degree would be semi-professional with more emphasis on preparing for jobs and on computer science.

The department is also investigating the feasibility in establishing a Master of Public Administration and is involved with an MA in political science at the Fort Bragg campus.

There has been an increase of political science majors, both on the graduate and undergraduate levels with students showing more interest in professional careers according to Dr. William F. Troutman, chairperson.

In April the department hosted the N.C. Political Science Association which brought around 175 visiting political scientist. The department co-sponsored a debate on Marxism between Dr. East in Political Science and Dr. Smith in Philosophy.

Faculty Attend Workshops

Over two-hundred and thirty students were majoring in Psychology with 75 graduating spring quarter. The department has 24 faculty members.

John Childers, director of testing, was selected to participate in a course at the University of Maryland. The course topic was aging and human development and special attention was given to the interaction between aging individuals and their environment.

Dr. Charles Moore attended a human sexuality workshop organized by Masters and Johnson. He also attended a behavior therapy workshop in Mississippi.

Professors Give Bicentennial Speeches

Since 1976 is America's Bicentennial, many philosophy professors have been involved in bicentennial discussions and speeches. One such program was "The American Experiment," a community symposium in which three professors discussed the topics, "The American Idea," "The American Reality," and "The American Agenda." During winter quarter, the philosophy honor society in conjunction with the political science honor society presented a debate involving a faculty member from each department.

Archeology Students Study Atlanta

Dr. David S. Phelps, coordinator of the archeology lab within the Sociology and Anthropology department, received a grant from the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Authority. The $4,388 will be used to support an archaeological and historical survey.

"The area now occupied by the city of Atlanta has been inhabited for about 15,000 years," said Phelps, "so we expect to uncover some interesting artifacts left by the early inhabitants."

Dr. John R. Marlo, chairperson of the department, was invited to chair a session at the annual convention of the American Sociological Association in New York.

Dr. Robert Bargu, coordinator of African Studies, attended the organizational meeting of the N.C. Conference on Black Studies. Plans were made at the conference to organize scholars in the field of black studies and to encourage N.C. colleges and universities to present more black studies.

Dr. Yooh Hough Kim, was killed in a traffic accident over the Easter holidays.

Faculty Members Form Union — Join

On May 13 an informational meeting concerning the American Federation of Teachers was held in Mendham.

Phil McKeany, executive director of the North Carolina federation addressed the forty faculty members that attended.

Affiliated with the AFL-CIO the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) is a national organization with active chapters in every state. The AFT has over 450,000 members, of which 45,000 are college teachers.

According to Dr. Paul Dowell of the English department, ECU has approximately 30 members, mostly from the English and math departments. Dowell expects the total membership to reach forty during the summer, at which time a local chapter will be chartered.

Dowell is serving as president and Robert J. Hursey of the math department is serving as treasurer until the charter is presented and new officers are elected.

Some faculty members at UNC-Charlotte and Western Carolina have both joined AFT and the faculty at UNC-Greensboro were considering joining.

McKeany described the organization as being "quite different" from other educational organizations such as the National Association of Educators (NAE) and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

"We have no administrative members in AFT," said McKeany. "Everything we do is done for teachers. We are the only independent voice of teachers."

We make the biggest contribution to education. Therefore, we should be heard."

According to McKeany, one of the most effective aspects of AFT is the collective bargaining contract.

"Our immediate goal is for a collective bargaining law from the federal government. Either we want a new law or we want to take the state law, which prohibits state employees from collective bargaining contracts, to court."

"We want teachers to have more freedom in the classroom, to have input into the subjects taught and the materials used. We want the non-professional educators (trustees and administrators) out of the classroom. By giving the teachers better conditions and more freedom we are freeing them of financial worries which prevent them from teaching 100 per cent effectively. AFT is a definite benefit for education because it allows the teacher to be free to teach, and therefore, do a better job," said McKeany.

"In order to get better conditions, better salaries, and no discrimination we must have collective bargaining."

Professor Donald Lawler of the English department asked McKeany where the AFT stood on the differences among various schools within the same system regarding salaries and benefits of faculty members. An example cited was UNC-Chapel Hill and East Carolina.

McKeany said that the money should be distributed equally when allocated by the N.C. Legislature which is not the case now.

"We want to be sure the money goes where the legislature says it should go. Somewhere someone is skimming the money off the top and spending it to increase salaries and benefits before distributing the remainder to the other schools. We want this stopped," said McKeany.

"In order for any changes to be made it must be done through collective bargaining contracts," he continued.

The AFT does not support closed agency shops said McKeany in response to a question of whether everyone had to join the union once it is established. An agency shop is where a teacher must pay dues in order to teach but is not a member of the union.

"Our collective bargaining contracts would represent non-members as well," said McKeany.

Another professor asked why the dues, $84 annually, were so high. McKeany replied that they were necessary because of the benefits of AFT. Two dollars and sixty-five cents of the monthly dues of seven dollars goes to the national office, two dollars to the state office and the remaining two dollars and thirty five cents to the local group.

The dues cover the cost of an automatic life insurance policy in an accidental death and a $500,000 occupational liability policy. The AFT also has a legal contingency fund and sponsors lobbyists in Washington, D.C. and various state capitols.

"... a free education should be made available to everyone."

Another question raised was who would be paying for the additional benefits and the increased Salaries? Would students have to pay an increased tuition?

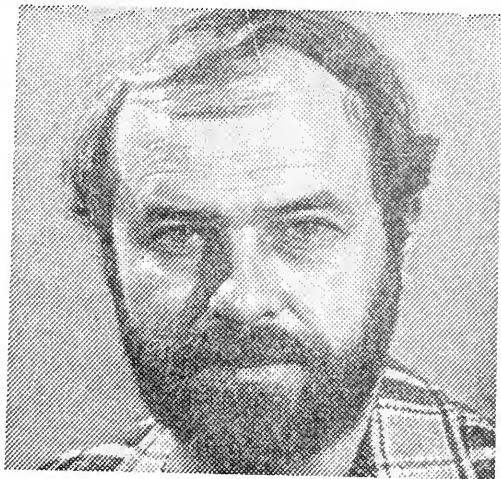

"The AFT feels that a free education should be available to everyone. Therefore, we try to keep tuition as low as possible. Whenever we introduce a pay increase, we always include various ways that the state can get the money, such as removing the ceiling from state taxes. In no way do we want tuition to be raised," said McKeany.

McKeany was also asked to comment on the concept of strikes by teachers.

"The AFT has been involved with strikes in the past, but so have the other educational organizations. In 1973-74, of all the strikes by teachers, about one-third involved AFT. The other 67 per cent were backed by NAE and AAUP."

"We were involved in the recent teachers strike in Pittsburgh. (see p. 290) The strike was caused by an inexperienced board of education which did not know that putting teachers in jail would only agitate matters not stop them."

American Federation of Teachers

Chancellor Leo Jenkins stated in a telephone interview that the faculty have "a perfect right to pursue membership in the AFT and it is strictly faculty business."

The strike forced negotiations with the board of education and resulted in improved educational benefits. We feel that negotiations could have been conducted without the strike had the board been experienced in handling problems," concluded McKeany.

Another question was, would the union protect incompetent teachers? McKeany's reply was, it would be the administration and not the union. Although the union was not completely a professional union as the AAUP, it is a union for all teachers that want to join.

Dr. Dowell said many college and university administrations have expressed opposition to unions. This has not been the case at ECU. Dr. Dowell said the administration at ECU was not opposed to such an organization.

The desire to impart knowledge should be inherent in any university, just as genuine interest in receiving knowledge should be present in its students. Although the classroom is the fundamental place for the transmission of facts in the various fields of learning, the academic organizations are proof that diversity in setting can provide atmospheres more conducive to learning along with unique opportunities that classrooms cannot offer.

By giving students opportunities to be in on different events, whether it be a beach trip, a banquet, or simply listening to a speaker in the field of the particular organization, a setting outside the classroom has the potential to make students more receptive to what is being offered. Too, many academic organizations are to a great extent for the purpose of giving recognition to students who have made outstanding achievements in their respective fields of study.

The promotion of fellowship among students who have like interests is another purpose of academic organizations. It is an invaluable one since many great achievements in the world have been made by the combination of intellect. The fraternal aspect of the organizations indirectly enhances their value.

The academic organizations, then, perform an important function in the university community by providing students with different atmospheres in which to learn, through academic presentations which cannot otherwise be made, by recognizing academic achievement, and by fostering fellowship among students. The good accomplished by the academic organizations is invaluable to the students, to the university, and to society.

Diversity Among Organizations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Coverage of academic and honorary organizations is based on the cooperation of the organization to notify the staff of any activities and to provide this staff with information concerning activities, awards, officers and members. Over 100 organizations were contacted twice through letters and calls. The response appears on the following pages.

DRILL TEAM

Those cadets who excel in drill and military bearing compose the Drill Team. It participates in parades, fund raising for charity, and anything else that will bring credit to ECU and enhance the leadership of the cadets. During the past year, the Drill Team gave a halftime performance during the VMI basketball game on January 24, and participated in the March-a-thon for the Pitt County March of Dimes. The Drill Team also performed in Wright Auditorium January 27.

Alpha Phi Gamma Sponsors Workshop

The principal activity of Alpha Phi Gamma, honorary journalism fraternity, was the sponsoring of a journalism workshop in October. The workshop included sessions conducted by faculty members and other authorities in the various areas of journalism. It was attended by representatives from twenty eastern North Carolina high schools. In May, Alpha Phi Gamma merged with another collegiate journalism society to form the Society for Collegiate Journalists. The society in May, under its new name and with many new members began making plans for another workshop to be held in September 1976.

Geology Club Has Retreat

The principal activity of the Geology Club was its retreat at Nags Head, N.C. the weekend of March 5-7. The group attended seminars held at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center in Manteo. Six speakers from various parts of the country were heard. Informal talks and discussions were held the night of March 5 and all day March 6.

A field trip was taken March 7 to study the dynamics of the high energy coastal and estuarine environments. The group investigated major geological systems at Oregon Inlet, Jockey's Ridge, and Coquina Beach, as well as shorelines and the salt marshes along Roanoke, Albemarle, and Croatan Sounds. In May, the club held an all day social affair in Washington, N.C.

The purpose of the Geology Club is to stimulate interest in the field of geology; to reward scholastic achievement; to initiate and carry out research projects; and to foster a closer relationship between the membership and faculty.

PHI UPSILON OMICRON

Two speakers heard by Phi Upsilon Omicron, an honorary Home Economics organization, were Ms. Sarah Dickson from the Pitt County Health Department who spoke in January on food laws and health regulations; and Evelyn Spangler, who spoke in March concerning clothing. The organization also held a cookout in May. The purpose of the organization is to advance Home Economics and be of service to the profession; to organize a group of persons with similar ideals and professional interests; to aid them in becoming effective leaders; and to establish lasting friendships and foster high professional ethics among the members.

In May, members of the League completed a special course in "Early Craftsmanship of the South" in Winston-Salem, N. C. During their visit, the group toured the 15 period rooms at the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts and other buildings in the village of Old Salem. Earlier in May, the League sponsored a campus exhibition of housing and management majors' portfolio work in the Mendenhall Student Center. The objective of the League is to provide for the professional development of ECU's Housing and Management majors and minors; and to share enthusiasm for the field of interior design with other students and with people who have attained recognition in the design profession.

League of Scholars Sponsor Scholarship Weekend

An organizational meeting in September began the year for the League of Scholars. This was followed in October by a reception in the Home Economics living room in order for the members to become acquainted. In November, Harry Stubbs spoke to the group on the subject of graduate school at ECU. Dr. David C. Lunney of the Chemistry Department talked to the league in December and presented a slide show. In January, the organization heard Dr. George Weigand, director of the counseling center at ECU, who spoke on the services offered by the counseling center. Dr. John Ebbs, The group's faculty advisor, spoke concerning international fellowships and scholarships. That same month the group was honored by a reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Jenkins. Mathematics professor Mrs. Tennala A Gross spoke to the group on the subject of the Equal Rights Amendment and the history of the women's movement. In May, the League of Scholars held its annual picnic. Services provided by the League of Scholars included helping General College students pre-register, supplying tutorial services wherever necessary, and contributing money to the Pitt County Department of Social Services to provide Christmas gifts for a foster child. In May the League worked with the Scholarship weekend Committee on Scholarship weekend. The purpose of the organization is to promote an atmosphere conducive to the stimulation of intellect, and to the consciousness and appreciation of learning opportunities offered outside the classroom or major fields.

Phi Sigma Pi — Tau Chapter — Outstanding in Nation — 10 Years

ECU's Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi honor fraternity was awarded the "Outstanding Chapter in the Nation" Award for the tenth consecutive year at the national convention in Washington, D. C. on September 26-27. Tau Chapter's official delegate to the convention was its president, Steve Benjamin. Tom Barwick, a member of Tau's delegation, served as parliamentarian for the convention, upon the invitation of National President Vaughn E. Rhodes. The Tau Chapter participated in several regular service projects, including a Christmas party for local underprivileged children, the Cerebral Palsy Telethon, and fund-raising for the Todd Scholarship program. The organization also conducted a raffle in order to raise money for the Richard C. and Claudia Pennock Todd Scholarship Fund.

ECU Pirates Leave Southern Conference

At the Board of Trustees meeting on April the ECU Board of Trustees approved a resolution which included plans for the school's withdrawal from the Southern Conference in 1977.

With the University of Richmond leaving the conference as of June 1976 ECU followed suit as part of a five-part plan that also called for the expansion of Ficklen Stadium's seating capacity to 35,000.

The five-part plan dealing with ECU athletics also called for a continuation in the improvement and increased funding in women's athletics, the continued growth of the entire athletic program and the research into the possibility of ECU joining a new athletic conference once its affiliation with the Southern was ended in 1977.

The plans of withdrawal called for the school to notify the conference of its intention to withdraw as of June 1, 1977 and that was done at the conference meeting held in Greenville in May.

Stadium expansion was included to help upgrade the football program at the university in an attempt to push the ECU program to greater levels. A fundraising drive was setup to raise funds to finance the stadium enlargement, which is scheduled to be completed in time for the 1977 football season.

The principal reason given for East Carolina's withdrawal from the conference centered around the football program. With ECU seeking a big-time football program and the NCAA threatening to reclassify ECU into a second division status if it remained in the conference, the ECU officials believed that withdrawal from the conference was necessary in order to prevent a lowering in classification of the ECU program when it met in the fall of 1976.

It was announced in late June that ECU had been named one of the 97 Division 1 Football Institutions designated by the NCAA. All ACC schools and Only William and Mary of the Southern Conference were classified Division 1. Shortly after the announcement of classification, William and Mary, VMI and Davidson all announced their withdrawal from the conference as of June 1977. Plans were being discussed with various other schools to form a new conference.

Pirates Upset Two ACC Teams

Although the Pirates finished with a winning season there was more to the '75 football season than eight wins and three losses. First, there was the building of a sound team from a group of individuals mixed with youth and experience. Next, there was an horrendous start that threatened to send the ECU team to one of its worst seasons in history. Finally, there was the regrouping which brought the ECU team full circle and resulted in the season-ending six game winning streak, which included wins over North Carolina and Virginia.

The season started out on a sour note with losses to N.C. State and Appalachian State. Playing before the largest crowd ever for an ECU-State game, the Pirates were convincingly beaten in the opener 26-3 by the Wolfpack. The 7,500 ECU fans were treated to quite a show in the first half as time and again the ECU defense rose to the occasion. The offense wasn't totally ineffective as it put together drives of 45 and 73 yards. ECU's only score of the game came on a 26 yard field goal by Pete Conaty with just 29 seconds left in the half.

In the second half, the Pirates managed only 39 yards causing Pat Dye to replace starter Mike Weaver with Jimmy Southerland. Southerland however, could not do better for the East Carolin offense. The defense played well, intercepting State quarterback Dave Buckley' passes three times in the first half.

TH.

After losing to N.C. State, the Pirates were trounced by Appalachian by a 41-25 score. The only thing which saved the Pirates from complete embarrassment were three second half scoring strikes from Pete Conaty. Conaty hit Terry Gallaher on two of the passes, 59 and 77 yard scores and added a pass by Clay Burnett for the final ECU score. Before Conaty's performance rallied the team, ECU had fallen behind 41-7. Gallaher's set two school records in the game scoring three touchdowns and gaining 218 yards on three receptions. The other touchdown by Gallaher came on an 82 yard pass from starter Mike Weaver.

Little else could be said for the Pirates, though, as Appalachian ran up 546 yards total offense against the Pirate defense, 394 of them on the ground. All ECU coach Dye could do after the game was praise the Appalachian offense: "... no doubt tonight they were a far superior team," said Dye. "I never would have thought their offense would be that good. I think it was a combination of them playing super and us playing poorly."

Dye did not have to make excuses for the next two games, though, as ECU beat William and Mary 20-0 and Southern Illinois 41-7 to even the season record at 2-2.

Against William and Mary, Dye said that "the defense came of age and played more aggressively" and against Southern Illinois Dye noted that the Pirate offense "was still making too many mistakes, but was becoming more effective."

The next week, the ECU football season took a turn for the worse as a fourth quarter Richmond score pushed the Spiders, eventually the conference champions, past ECU to a 17-14 win. This loss not only put a damper on the Pirates hope for a conference title but also ended an 18 game home winning streak which had dated back to 1971. What was worse was that ECU blew a 14-0 first half lead and allowed the Spiders to win. The winning Richmond score came with 9:57 left in the game, but ECU failed to come back.

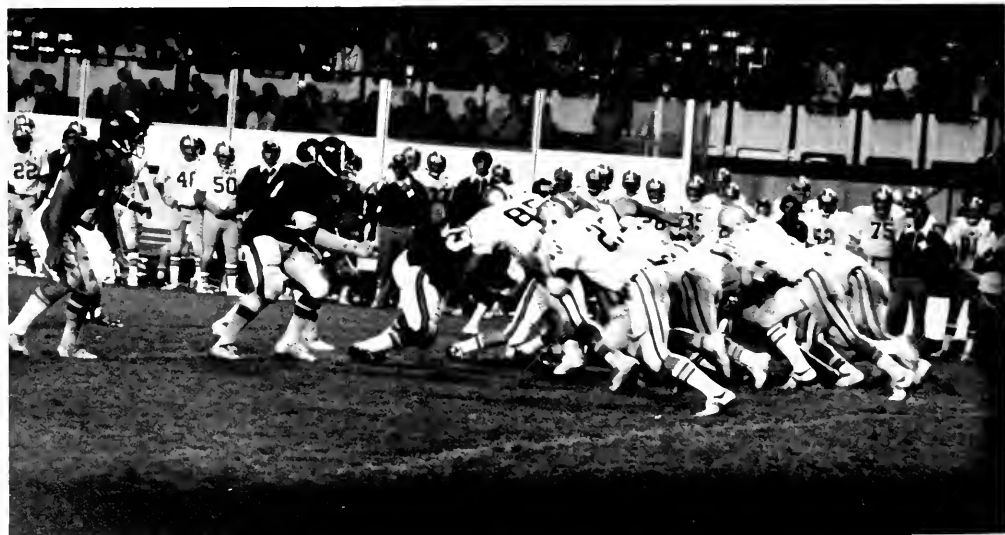

After the game, Dye stated that "We're in a situation now where the season can turn two ways. The players can buckle down and try and improve or we can just keep on going in the direction we are and let ourselves fall apart. Right now, I would say that this team has no character. We haven't played like we can or beat anyone we shouldn't have.

"The coaching staff and myself can only do so much. If our players aren't hungry to win or to excel then we can't help. The winning attitude has got to come from the players."

Whether or not Coach Dye's comments motivated the team, the Pirates turned around and played the remainder of the games the way everyone thought they could play. This resulted in six consecutive wins and a final 8-3 record.

The first of the six wins was probably the hardest fought game of the season for East Carolina. The Pirates travelled to Charleston, S.C. to take on the Citadel Bulldogs, who at the time had the ninth best defense in the nation.

ATH.

Dye called the victory "the hardest hitting defensive game that I've ever been involved in since coming to ECU," and praised the team by saying "tonight the players showed real class because they played a Citadel team which can really play defense. I have been talking all year about the unlimited ability this team has, and tonight we saw some of it."

The next weekend, October 19, ECU celebrated Homecoming with a 42-14 rout of Western Carolina University. The Pirates intercepted seven Catamount passes and blocked a punt. Jim Bolding led the defense with three interceptions as Gallaher grabbed two touchdown passes of 64 yards each by Weaver and Southerland. Weaver, returning to his first string role led ECU to four scores.

The pirates then upset the North Carolina Tar Heels (see page 160) for the third straight win. After the Carolina game, Dye said "everything that has happened since the Richmond game has to be credited to the players ... what happened in Chapel Hill as a great win for East Carolina and was made possible by many people."

The football team won three more games to round out the season, but the really big win of those three was the 61-10 win over Virginia, which was coached by former ECU coach Sonny Randle. In the Virginia game, ECU set records for total offense 690 yards and rushing offense 633 yards. Bolding intercepted two more passes working towards becoming the number one pass interceptor in the nation. In all ECU set eight records in the game, including four team records and four conference records. The longest scoring play of the day for the Pirates was Eddie Hicks' 87 yard touchdown run in the fourth period.

By the end of the season, ECU could have very easily had the "best team in the state," despite the early season losses to State and Appalachian. In the Southern Conference, the Pirates finished second to Richmond with a 5-2 record.

Although no bowl bid was forthcoming for the Pirates, as many had anticipated, there were some honors for the Pirates as Jim Bolding was named the AP All-American Second Team. Bolding finished as the nation's leader in pass interceptions.

"In Memory of a Great Man"

On October 24, 1975 Clarence Stasavich died of a heart attack. His death came less than 24 hours before what has been called the greatest football victory in the history of East Carolina, the 38-17 over the University of North Carolina.

Stasavich had been Athletic Director at East Carolina since 1963, during which he had built the school's athletic program up to Division One caliber.

He was also known as a great football coach. At East Carolina, "Stas" compiled a record of 50-27-1 in eight years. In those eight years there were also three post-season bowl appearances.

Clifton Moore, the faculty chairman of Athletics at ECU said of Stasavich's death: "We did not always agree, but whatever his feelings were you knew they were from the heart. The likes of 'Stas' do not come our way often . . ."

Perhaps the greatest tribute to Stasavich could have been that victory over Carolina the next day, for it had been Stasavich who had worked so hard and diligently to get the Tar Heel's on ECU's schedule.

All those who knew the man, know that Clarence Stasavich would have loved it.

Two Players Make All-Conference Teams

ATH.

Suffering through the season with injuries and inconsistent performances from its players, the soccer team finished with a disappointing 3-6-3 record.

"Even though our records do not show it, our kids played well," said Coach Curtis Frye.

The season began with high hopes for the Pirates, but early season ties with N.C. State and Campbell College took much of the wind out of the pirates sail.

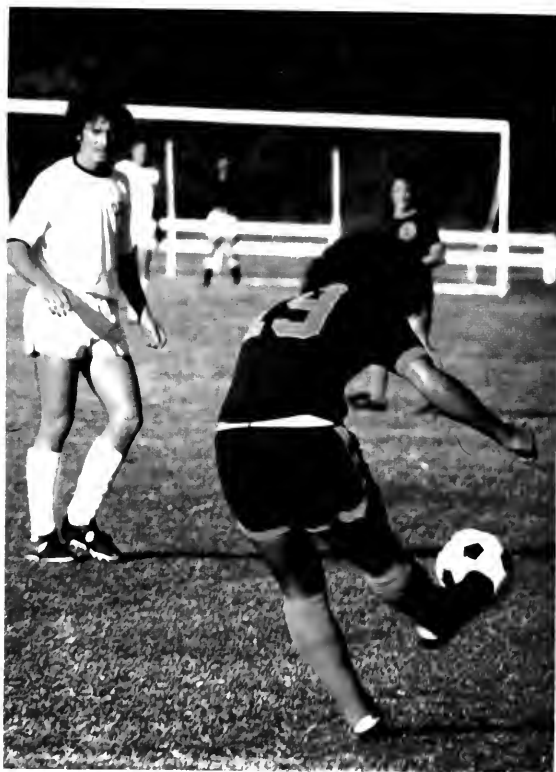

While ECU had defeated all three ACC teams on it's schedule the year before, the team could manage only to tie with state this season. They lost to both Duke and North Carolina by 2-1 margins.

In the conference, ECU could only beat Richmond. The pirates beat the Spiders, 4-0, as Tom Tozer scored three goals. The other wins were over Pembroke, by 9-0 and 6-0 scores.

Two players were named to the All-Conference teams, Pete Angus to first team and Tom Long to second.

Rugged Defense Gives Clubbers a Winning Season

Featuring a rugged defense the club football team completed its season with a 6-4 record. The impotent offense, however, resulted in low scoring games.

Coached by Ernie Wruck, the pirate clubbers played against Ft. Bragg, Duke, Rock Hill, American University, St. Paul and Piedmont College.

The first win of the season came as a result of "outrageous play" according to Wruck against Duke. At the end of the 16-0 match, Wruck said the team "finally put everything together."

The essential purpose of the team was not so much whether they won or lost, but the fact that they got to play. The true fellowship of athletics for "the fun of it" was displayed by the club football team.

Standouts for the clubbers were Terry Ramps, John McMillian, Yank Pew and Bruce Hall.

"This Was Just One of Those Years"

In 1974-75 the Pirates basketball team set the Southern Conference on its ear by rolling up an impressive 19-9 record and playing in the National Commissioner's Tournament in Louisville, Ky. Prior to the opening of the 1975-76 season, the ECU roundballers had been picked as co-favorites to win the conference title.

It did not turn out that way, though. The ECU team suffered a horrendous start, losing its first four games by an average of 27 points, and seemingly the ECU team never recovered.

"This was one of those years," said ECU coach Dave Patton following the season. "It was like we could never put two games together back to back, or for that matter, two halves together back-to-back." The Pirates suffered all year. First from a lack of leadership and then apparently from just plain hard luck and bad bounces.

The Pirates travelled to College Park to open their season against the University of Maryland, which at the time was the third-ranked team in the nation in the pre-season polls. Also the first game for the Terrapins. ECU was mauled by the Terps by a 127-84 score. The Terps point total was a school record for them.

The next game was not much better when the Pirates were soundly defeated by a tough North Carolina State Wolfpack team, 117-81, as State all-American Kenny Carr drilled in 34 points to lead the rout.

Next the Pirates travelled to VMI's Fieldhouse and, again, they were soundly defeated by the opposition. This time the score was 73-56.

A loss to Duke University followed and after its first two weeks of play ECU found itself standing with an 0-4 record, not having been in any of the games past their first half.

Over the next six games, though the season began to look up as the Pirates won five of six games to pull their record even for the only time during the season.

East Carolina returned home to beat UNC-Wilmington and Davidson, then travelled to the Citadel to take a close conference win over the Bulldogs, 68-67.

With a 3-5 record, ECU played in the Tangerine Bowl Classics in Orlando, Florida and were downed in the first round by Rollins College, 96-73, before rebounding to beat Marshall 70-67 for the third place spot in the tournament.

Returning home, ECU took another win over the Citadel Bulldogs, this time by an 81-76 score, to pull the season record even at 5-5.

ECU shortly stayed at the .500 level as it lost to Old Dominion, 95-70, but defeated defending conference champion Furman by a 72-68 count.

In the regionally televised Furman game, ECU was led by freshman whiz Louis Crosby. Crosby came off the bench to score 22 points and earn himself a permanent starting berth in the Pirate lineup. Senior Earl Garner also scored 21 points.

But the Furman contest was probably the highlight of the East Carolina season, as the Pirate basketballers dropped five of their next six games to fall to 7-11 on the season.

There were three straight conference losses, to Richmond, Appalachian State and William and Mary, in which the Pirates played poorly in losing.

A brief respite hit the ECU season when the Pirates, buoyed by an emotional uplift resulting from media criticism, put the axe to the Richmond Spiders with an 85-75 romp in Minges Coliseum. The Pirate win was led by Earl Garner, who scored 28 points, and Larry Hunt, who grabbed 18 rebounds.

For the moment at least it seemed that maybe ECU, now 7-9 might turn the corner.

The next two games, though, saw the Pirates return once again to the unemotional brand of basketball the team had been playing most of the season, as the Pirates lost to the eventual conference champion VMI Keydets and St. Peter's University of New Jersey, both by 14 point margins.

With a 5-5 conference mark, ECU was now fighting for a home playoff spot and no longer for the first-place spot they had been predicted to fight for prior to the season.

During the next four games on their schedule, the ECU team played possibly its best four game-stretch of the year, but in keeping with the tone of the season, the Pirates could only win two of those four games.

The Pirates began with a win over Davidson on the road. The Davidson game found Garner turning in the best single-game individual performance of the year for a Pirate player, as he scored 31 points on 13 field goals and five free throws.

In addition to Garner, Wade Henekel played his best game up to that time, scoring 22 points. Over the final third of the season, Garner and Henkel were probably the most proficient of the Pirate players.

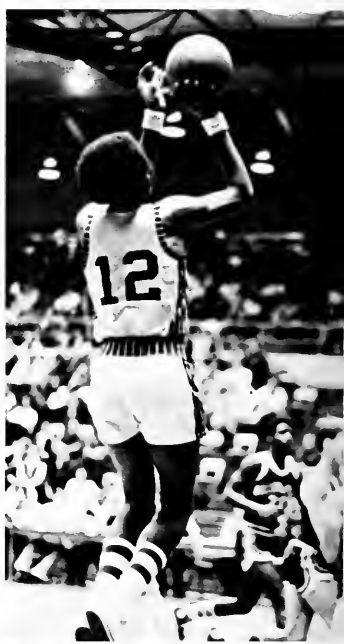

Against William and Mary, the Pirates lost a heartbreaker when the Indians sank a last-second shot for a 56-54 win over the ECU team.

After the game, ECU coach Patton summed up the defeat, and possibly the story of the entire ECU season.

"You have to play 40 minutes of basketball to win and we didn't. That has been the story all year long. One game we're up and the next game we're down. If I could figure it out we would fix it, but I can't."

In the game ECU had led by nine with only 14 minutes to play, but William and Mary came back to tie the score with five minutes to play before both teams went into the showdown. William and Mary got the last shot, though, and won the game.

Ten days later, the Pirates rebounded from the William and Mary loss with an avenging 84-66 rout over Appalachian State in Minges. The loss evened the score with AUS for a 50-48 loss in Boone earlier in the year. The Pirates played 40 minutes of good basketball for a chance and the playoff was a chance at a first-division finish in the standings and a home playoff berth.

The Pirates' joy was shortlived though, as two days later the Furman Paladins avenged their early season loss to ECU with a 83-76 win over the Pirates.

Against Furman, the Pirates played well, but the Paladins' shot 64 percent in the second half to overcome an eight-point ECU lead and down the Pirates. The Paladins were led by all-conference selections Jim Strickland and Ray Miller.

For all intent and purposes the Pirates season ended after the Furman game, ECU won two of its final three games during the regular season, but none of them in outstanding fashion, to finish the season at 11-14.

ECU also earned a home playoff berth' by tying for third place in the conference with a 7-7 record, but it came against Appalachian State. ECU lost to Appalachian by a 79-72 score. The story' of the game proved to be at the foul line, where ASU outscored ECU by 17-0. ECU never took a shot from the foul line — a factor that left East Carolina coach Dave Patton disgusted after the game.

Nevertheless, it was not in the cards for the East Carolina Pirate Basketball team to play well in 1976. The loss of four seniors the year before took much of the leadership away from the team and erratic playing of the young ECU team outweighed the leadership offered by Garner over the final half of the season.

Wrestlers Win Fifth Straight Southern Conference Title

ATH.

The only disappointment for the East Carolina Wrestling team at the end of the season was the low finish in the NCAA competition in Tucson, Arizona, despite sending six wrestlers to the competition.

As for the rest of the season it was the best season in years for Coach John Welborn and the ECU wrestling program. The highlights of the season was the fifth straight conference title as the Pirates took five firsts and five seconds to win the tournament.

ECU's champions were Paul Osman, at 126 pounds, Tom Marriott at 142 pounds, Phil Mueller at 167 pounds, Ron Whitcomb at 177 pounds and Mike Radford at 190 pounds.

The second place finishers were Wendell Hardy at 118, Tim Gaghan at 134, Paul Thorp at 150, Paul Prewett at 158, and D.T. Joyner in the heavyweight division.

As a result of the great season Welborn was named Southern Conference Wrestling Coach of the year for the fifth straight time. East Carolina was disappointed in the NCAA playoffs though as only Radford could advance as far as the quarterfinals.

During the regular season, ECU ran to a 10-2 record losing only to nationally-ranked LeHigh and Oregon State. The Pirates' ten wins included wins over North Carolina, N.C. State, and Conference foes Richmond, Citadel, Appalachian State and William and Mary. The wrestlers also performed well in several tournaments including the Wilkes Open and the North Carolina Invitational. In the latter Phil Mueller was voted the Most Outstanding Wrestler.

In winning the N.C. Invitational, Mueller pinned all four of his opponents in route to the title at the 167 pound level.

The four seniors on the team made major contributions to the team's overall success.

The leading performer of the four was Ron Whitcomb. Whitcomb at 177 pounds was 29-2 overall for the Pirates and 11-0 in dual meet competition. He also won four tournament titles: the Southern, the N.C. Invitational, the Neptune and the Monarch Open.

Mike Radford was the second leading wrestler of the seniors. Radford at 190 was 27-4 for the season and won tournament titles in the same four events as Whitcomb.

Tom Marriott compiled a 19-5 record at the 142 pound level and won his fourth straight conference title at that level. Marriott also won the Monarch Open and finished second in the Neptune and N.C. Invitational tournaments.

The final senior of top caliber on this year's squad was Paul Ketcham. Ketcham finished the year with an impressive 17-6 record but did not qualify the Southern Conference tournament.

ATH.

From the rest of the team, junior Phil Mueller and sophomores Paul Thorp and Paul Osman were the top competitors. Mueller finished with a 25-3 overall record and a record of 11-0 in dual meets. Thorp was 25-8-1 on the year and Osman was 23-9. Osman was also voted the Outstanding Wrestler in the Neptune Open early in the year.

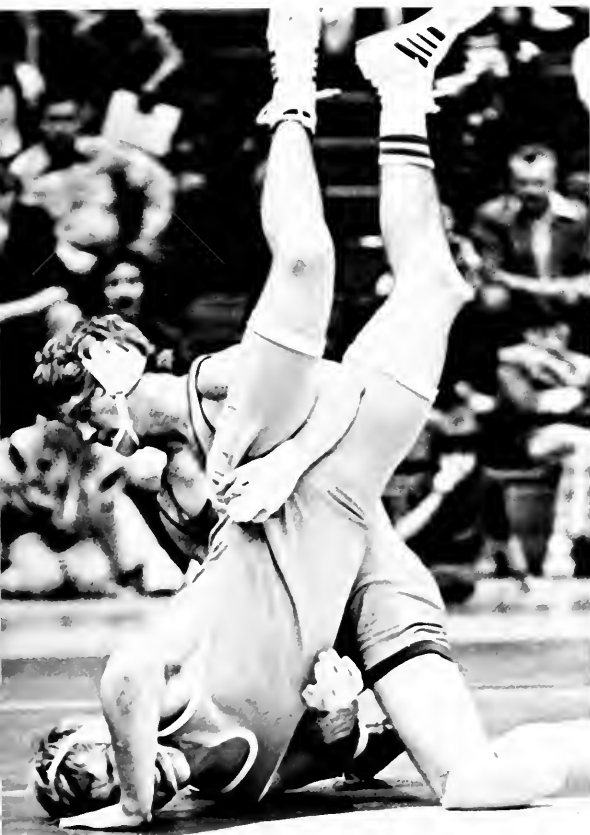

Three freshmen, D.T. Joyner, Wendall Hardy and James Kirby had winning records for the Pirates. Joyner showed improvement and was 9-7 on the year, Hardy finished 12-9 on the year and Kirby was 9-6.

Radford won his third straight Southern Conference title in his senior campaign as Whitcomb and Thorp each won their second title.

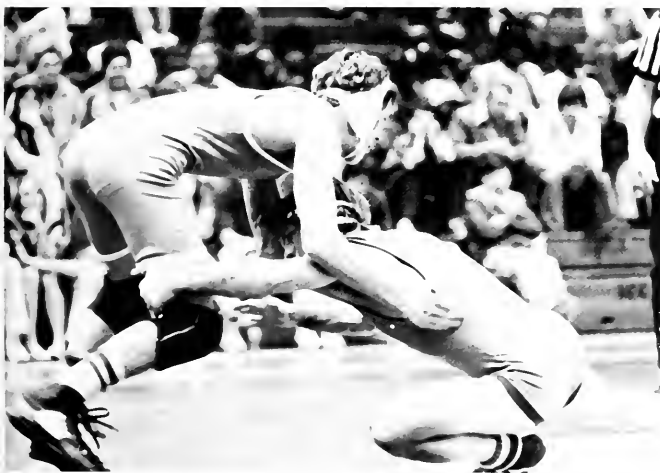

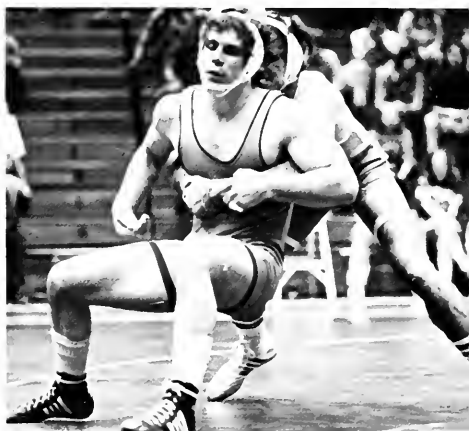

On the team's disappointing performance in the NCAA, Welborn commented, "It just goes to show you how tough the competition is in the NCAA. Eight wrestlers that defeated guys on our team placed in the tournament, so I really can't be too disappointed with them."

Southern Conference Champs for

The East Carolina swim team swam to its eleventh straight Southern Conference championship and finished second in the Eastern Regionals to highlight its 1975-76 season.

The Pirates, who were 9-2 in dual meets during the year, also swept meets from Maryland and Duke to round out a very fine year.

In the conference tournament Ross Bohlken was named the Outstanding Swimmer as he won two events on his own and swam on two relay teams. Scharf, however, was unreasonably shunned by the conference for Coach of the Year honors.

ECU sent four swimmers to the NCAA finals in Princeton, N.J. but none of them performed well enough to place very high. John McCauley competed in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events and three other members of the team, Bohlken, Billy Thorne and John Tudor, in the 800 freestyle relay.

At the Eastern Invitational in University Park, Pa. the Pirate swimmers placed behind only Pittsburgh among some of the finest swimming teams in the East. During the three-day meet, the Pirates broke eight varsity records and four frosh records and qualified its four swimmers for the NCAA Nationals.

McCauley won the 50 freestyle and 100 freestyles and swam on the winning 800 yard freestyle team.

During the season, McCauley, along with Steve Ruedlinger, Tudor, Stewart Mann, Bohlken and Doug Brindley led the ECU swimmers to what may have been its most successful season in years from an achievement basis.

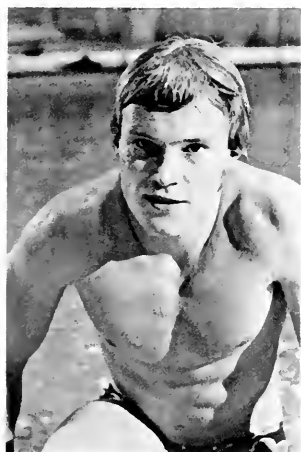

In the conference meet, ECU won 13 of 16 events to sweep past the field and continue its domination. At the conference meet, only ECU's poor diving showed through as a weakness.

Rugby — ECU's New Sport on Campus

After being turned away by the Intramural and athletics department, the East Carolina Rugby Club became sponsored by the SGA. Under the leadership of Kieran Shanahan, the club began to take shape as over fifty persons showed interest in the new sport. Of these fifty participants, only two had ever played the sport before. After weeks of training and conditioning the Club leveled off to about thirty members.

Opponents consisted of such established Clubs as North Carolina State, Hampden-Sydney, and Camp Lejune. Leading the scrum in every match was Mark Burroughs. The club accomplished an impressive 6-4 record and became accepted as members of the North Carolina Rugby Union.

At all times, the players considered themselves not as a team, but as a family. Rugby became an organized, established, and respected club at East Carolina.

Pirates Finish 22-7 Season Best in E.C.U. History

1976 was a strange year in many ways for the ECU baseball team. Although the team finished the season with its best record since 1967, the Pirates finished a dismal fourth in the conference.

ECU had an overall record of 22-7 for the season, but when it came to winning Southern Conference games the Pirates had trouble. ECU won only seven of its 13 conference games and finished behind Furman, Richmond and the Citadel in the standings.

And to top it off, the Pirates got a new coach at the end of the year. George Williams, who had coached ECU to its last Southern Conference baseball crown in 1974, stepped down at the end of the season after a three-year stretch as head coach and seven years as an assistant coach. Williams said his reasons for retiring was to spend more time with his family. The 37-year old compiled a 56-34 record during his three-year stint at the helm of the Pirate ship.

Williams was replaced by Monte Little, who had served as an assistant coach under Williams for three years, as well as soccer coach during the 1972 and 1973 seasons. Little, like Williams was a veteran of the professional ranks and the fact that he came from within the university kept a feeling of familiarity in the baseball camp.

Perhaps the biggest accomplishment for the baseball team during the 1976 season was its 7-0 record against teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference. In compiling its perfect seven-game streak against the ACC, ECU beat North Carolina State twice, Duke twice, Maryland twice and North Carolina once.

The North Carolina game was probably the most exciting of the games for ECU as the Pirates beat the Tar Heels at home by scoring two runs in a ninth-inning rally after two men had gone out.

Within the conference there were few bright spots, but eight ECU players received conference honors of one kind or another. Steve Bryant, second base, and Joe Roenker, leftfielder, were named to the SC First team and Bob Feeney, a pitcher, and Sonny Wooten, a first baseman, were honored on the second team. Four Pirates; third baseman Geoff Beaston, catcher Howard McCullough, pitcher Dean Reavis, and shortstop Rick Koryda, were all named to the Honorable Mention team.

Koryda finished as the Pirates' leading hitter with a .414 average and Roenker blasted five home runs and batted in 31 runs to lead the team in slugging. On the mound, Pete Conaty was 5-0 with a 1.21 ERA, but Terry Durham (6-1) and Dean Reavis (4-2) were the real Pirate workhorses on the conference's best pitching staff. Feeney, somewhat of a surprise pick to the All-SC second team, lost his first game ever at ECU during the season but finished with a 3-4 record and a 2.57 ERA.

Beaston set four career records on a late season hitting tear that saw him finish the year with a .376 average.

Despite the poor SC season then, ECU still had a good year to talk about in 1976.

Southern Conference Champions First Time in Ten Years

ATH.

Many years of frustration ended for the ECU Outdoor track team in 1976 as it returned from the Southern Conference meet as champions for the first time in ten years.

Having finished second to William and Mary for eight years, the Pirates finally turned the trick with their balanced performances in the running and jumping events.

In the 100, 220 and 440 runs, the Pirates placed three or more runners in the top six to roll up valuable points and ECU did the same in the long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus, javelin and hurdles.

For coach Bill Carson it ended a year of frustration that saw the team suffer many injuries which hampered its performance prior to the conference meet.

Qualifying for the NCAA's for ECU were Carter Suggs, Calvin Alston, Marvin Rankins and the 440 relay team of Al Washington, Suggs, Maurice Huntley and Alston.

Starring in the SC championships for ECU were Tom Watson, who won 21 points in four events for the Pirates; Suggs, who won the 100 yard dash and ran on winning 440 relay team; Rankins, who won the 120 high hurdles; Alston, who won the 220 and ran on the 440 relay team; George Jackson, who won the long jump; Charlie Moss, who won the 440 and ran on the winning mile relay team; and many others.

Carson was voted Coach of the Year in leading the team to the title and although he never won the MVP, 22 of the team that went to the championships qualified for toward the title.

ECU also competed in the 7th Invitational and the Furman Invitational during the spring season and sent 10 performers to the North Carolina-Virginia Meet of Champions in Williamsburg, VA.

Debbie Freeman

By JOHN EVANS

A pacesetter for her fellow athletes Debbie Freeman tied for honors as ECU's Athlete of the year.

The 5'8", 155 pound sophomore was an all round athlete who combined speed, strength and agility to compete and win in several different sports. She played basketball, volleyball and track for the Women's program and made the NCAIAW and the Greensboro Daily News' All-State teams in Basketball.

In her most outstanding sport — basketball — Freeman led the state's Division One scorers by averaging over 24 points a game during the season and was third in the state in rebounding with a 13-rebound a game tally.

During the year she set single and season records for scoring average, rebounding average, rebounds and field goals, field goal attempts and rebounds.

She fell only two points short of the women's single game scoring record with a 34 point performance. During a three game stretch, Miss Freeman scored 100 points.

In track, Ms. Freeman competed in the discus, javelin, shot put and 440 relay to help form a foundation for the team in its first year.

She was a leader in a different way for the ECU women, too. She was one of the seven women to be awarded the first athletic grants for women at ECU and her competitive spirit is a trademark of the women's program.

Catherine Bolton who coached Debbie in basketball and volleyball said of Debbie that "she is one of the finest natural athletes I have ever seen." She is definitely what one would call a year-round athlete."

Laurie Attlants the track coach commented, "Debbie does what she does mostly on desire and strength."

Ms. Freeman was honored earlier in the year by the Greenville Sports Club as Female Athlete of the year.

Jim Bolding

A second-team All American defensive back, Jim Bolding led the nation in interceptions and set nearly every one of the school's records in that category.

A junior from High Point, Bolding tied with Debbie Freeman as Athlete of the Year. Bolding broke nearly every ECU career and single-season interception records in 1975 and his 10 interceptions in 10 games made him the leader in the nation. It also made his career total 19, ten shy of the NCAA career record.

He tied a school and conference record with three interceptions against Western Carolina and he already holds career records for punt returns, punt return yardage, interceptions, most interceptions in a season, interception yardage, and career interception yardage.

All this and Jim Bolding still has another year remaining in his college career. In his three years at ECU, he has started in every game but two and has been named to the All-Conference and All-State the past two years.

Football coach Pat Dye said of Bolding that "he has an uncanny ability to read pass routes and break on the ball. His recognition and positioning as a defensive back is truly outstanding. He does so much on the field that it can't be reflected in statistics. There is no doubt in my mind that Jimmy Bolding was an All-American last year as selected.

Bolding, like Freeman was honored by the Greenville Sports Club as Athlete of the Year at ECU.

Members Win First Place in Tournament

William (Bill) Cain became the ECU Athletic Director on November 1, 1975 after the sudden death of Clarence Stasavich the week before.

Chancellor Jenkins made the announcement following the unanimous recommendation made to him by a special committee set up to look into naming a successor for Stasavich.

In making the decision, the university selected an ECU graduate instead of going outside the immediate university administration. In announcing Cain's selection, Jenkins spelled out how the selection was made.

"After the tragic death of Clarence Stasavich, it became our responsibility to find a successor. We appointed a committee to recommend what procedure we should follow, whether to search within the program or to go outside and search the country for a new man."

The committee decided to stay within the system, leaving the way open for Cain as the new Athletic Director.

Chancellor Jenkins supported the committee's recommendation of Cain by saying, "The committee unanimously voted to promote from within and I think they have made an excellent choice in Bill Cain."

Cain is not only a graduate of the university, but he is a man who has been connected with the ECU Athletic Department since 1968. He has been the Assistant Athletic Director since 1972.

Cain referred to Stasavich when speaking about his new role as Athletic Director.

"Coach Stas laid the foundations for us to build on. Now I will carry on this tradition and continue to build. I will do all I possibly can to build for our students, alumni and the university in general."

Athletic Department Is Headed by New Director

John Welborn, head wrestling coach at East Carolina for the past nine years, has been named Assistant Athletic Director by Bill Cain.

"With his success in athletics, he will be a great asset to our program in this new capacity. He is well known in athletic circles and has made a name for himself," Cain commented.

Welborn coached the wrestling team to the fifth straight Southern Conference championship and sent six wrestlers to the nationals. He was also named Coach of the Year.

His duties, primarily concerned with the non-revenue sports programs, will not prevent him from continuing as head coach of the ECU Wrestling program.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

Achieves Status

Women's athletics is a new program at ECU and has been in existence just over two years. What began as clubs in the sixties has grown into a full scale athletic program.

Catherine Bolton, the coach and director of women's athletics has initiated seven sports for women: field hockey, tennis, volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, swimming and golf.

With an increased budget, a Sports Information and Promotion Program was added to the program. For the first time in the history of ECU seven women students were awarded athletic scholarships.

Since the program has improved and increased in size two new coaches have been added to the staff, Laurie Arrants and Steveda Chepko. All events are presently scheduled in Minges rather than Memorial Gym.

Ms. Bolton feels the women's program has made good progress in the few years it has been in existence and she anticipates increased growth in the future.

"Now that we have a staff to work with, we hope to make some advances so that we can compete against schools with larger programs.

"We plan to schedule more home games in the future. Basketball and gymnastics draw good crowds.

"Although technically we are still a 'baby program' compared to schools with higher budgets, we are growing and can compete against these schools now and provide good competition.

"More important than a winning season is pleasant atmosphere for the participants," continued Ms. Bolton. "The players will give their best because they want to and not because they have to."

Works Towards Title IX Compliance

by Diane Taylor

The ECU Athletics Department faces numerous problems in moving toward Title IX compliance by the July 1, 1978 deadline.

One of the biggest difficulties facing the athletic administrators is money. Of the total $934,900 athletic budget for 1975-76 only $51,375 went to women's athletics. This will not be enough to begin moving toward Title IX compliance in the coming year according to Catherine Bolton.

"In 1974-75 Title IX was a real 'weapon'" said Bolton. "It was realized our position of leadership in competition was slipping." (1972-73 the ECU women's basketball team won the state championship and participated in the nationals. The gymnastics team was third in the region and the women's swim team went to the nationals.)

"Some remarkable changes have already been wrought, but right now we are in the process of trying to correct that lull from 1972-74 when everyone else was growing and we weren't" said Bolton.

The athletics department is confident of making improvements and meeting Title IX standards with a minimum of problems.

"There has been a readiness on the part of the coaches and athletes to comply" said Bill Cain, athletic director.

"If we are going to meet Title IX we're going to have to get more money," said Bolton.

"We are in bad need of equipment purchases," said Bolton.

Awards 7 Scholarships — First Time in ECU History

by Diane Taylor

Seven scholarships were awarded to women athletes this year for the first time in ECU history. The scholarships were awarded in four of the eight sports and the addition of two scholarships is foreseen in the near future.

The scholarships were awarded to girls with outstanding careers in high school and superior performance in their college careers.

Debbie Denise Freeman, a P.E. major played volleyball, basketball and track. She was a sophomore from Jacksonville, N.C.

April Ross, a freshman from Bath, N.C. played volleyball and basketball and is a P.E. major.

Donna Jean Williford was awarded a scholarship in track. A freshman from New Bern, N.C. she set state records in 1974.

Beverly Osborn, a senior from Winston Salem, N.C. was awarded a scholarship in swimming. She qualified for the national swim tournament.

Frances Swenholt played field hockey and basketball. A senior from Falls Church, Va., she made the Deep South All Star hockey team in 1975 and was chosen for the Southeast Hockey Team.

Gail Betton, a music therapy and education major from Millsboro, Del. played field hockey, basketball and softball. She was also named to the Deep South and Southeast teams in 1974.

Clair Albrittain, a native from Arlington, Va. swims for the lady pirates and qualified for the national swim tournament.

Although the scholarships are beneficial to the recipients they are problems for the administration.

Catherinie Bolton explained that along with offering scholarships women's coaches would have to begin a recruiting program and often the recruiting program is more expensive than the scholarships.

If a full recruiting program is to evolve there must be more women's coaches, according to Bolton. "And that takes money."

"Until women's sports develop enough to get receipts sufficient to support a scholarship program then it's difficult to philosophically support it," said Bolton.

"I don't think women's sports will ever generate a substantial amount of revenue," said Cliff G. Moore Vice chancellor of business affairs.

Bill Cain, athletic director, expressed strong doubts that women's sports would ever achieve a large audience support.

Title IX regulations require that scholarships must be proportionate to the number of male and female athletes in a college program. There are seven women athletes on scholarship compared to 200 male athletes.

"By right of Title IX, 25 percent of all scholarships should go to women," said Bolton. However it is not clear if the percent should be on the number of scholarships given or the total amount of money spent, she explained. There is obvious discrimination between male and female athletics in facilities, in equipment and in privileges.

"Title IX means changing in two or three years. Without it the changes would take 20 years."

Cain replied, "If we are going to have women's programs, I want to have good ones and we're going to do what's right by the women."

Ms. Bolton summed up the feeling for Title IX, "Thank God for Title IX or we wouldn't be where we are now."

The women's volleyball team was not very happy with their season record of 7-13. However, the season was not a total disappointment since the team was asked to participate in the North Carolina Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women volleyball tournament which was held at Appalachian state in November.

Members of the volleyball team (Below) were Lori Calverly, Gale Chamblee, Marie Chamblee, Kim Clayton, Debbie Freeman, Corny Frye, Gail Kerbaugh, Charlotte Layotn, Vicki Lee, Kim Michael, April Ross, Rosie Thompson, Connie Wagoner, Donna Woolard, Coach Catherine Bolton, trainer, David Maddox and Manager Velma Thomas.

Volleyball Team Competes in State Tournament

Field Hockey Team Faces Tough Competition

Field Hockey is one of the fastest growing women's sports at East Carolina. Despite the fact relatively few schools in North Carolina sponsor programs, the ECU team has increased it's schedule from a nine to an 18 game schedule.

Playing most of their games against teams from outside North Carolina, the Lady Pirates final record was not that good. The women did take two of three matches in the Deep South tournament. ECU's wins were over Campbell College, 2-1, and High Point, also by 2-1.

Two ECU players, Frances Swenholt and Gail Beeton were selected to the Deep South All-Star team. These two were also awarded scholarships in Athletics. They were two of only seven women athletes to be awarded scholarships in 1976.

More important to the team than winning is the goal of promoting the game of Field Hockey in the state of North Carolina. East Carolina's team does a good job of doing this — John Evans

Lady Pirates Exert Over-all Team Play

The opening of the season proved disappointing to the Lady Pirates when they dropped their season opener to West-Chester State College. But a strong over-all team effort and free-throw accuracy kept the pirates in the game and made them a challenge to all their opponents.

The tendency to play "like a team" came forth again and this time spurred the women cagers on to a 74-65 win over Madison College. The Cagers showed a strong defensive surge in the game, and the overall team play never left a doubt about the outcome.

The Pirates faced stiff opposition during their season especially when they battled both N.C. State and UNC-Chapel Hill in the same weekend. Despite the fact that the Lady Pirates conceded both matches to the opponents, they fought as they had shown they would, and kept State's victory score to only one point higher in overtime.

Strong defense and team effort came to the rescue again when the team traveled to Elon College and took the Championship of the Invitational Tournament.

Throughout the season the Lady Pirates effort was aided by several outstanding players: April Ross and Debbie Freeman who are on full scholarships, Rosie Thompson, and Susan Manning. Manning team captain, was an invaluable leader and helped pull the team together and co-ordinate the full team effort. Freeman was at one time top woman scorer in the state, and both Freeman and Thompson were ranked among the five top rebounders in the state.

Team coach Catherine Bolton praised the team for the hard work and fine performance shown during their season.

Intramural Program

With the beginning of fall quarter, student fees increased five dollars per quarter for intramural activities. The fees have gone a long way in improving the intramural program.

Wayne Edwards has been employed as the Director of Intramurals at ECU. A central intramural sports office controls both men's and women's intramural activities.

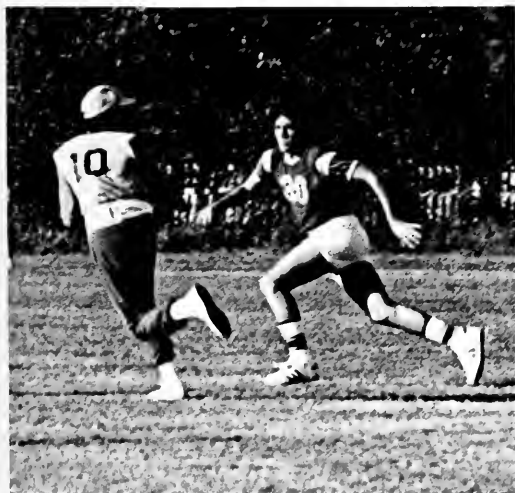

The student fees were used to purchase new equipment for the program for all sports. Edwards said that the old equipment for football, basketball and softball was in bad shape, therefore new equipment was purchased.

Edwards feels that the new equipment was a good use for the student fees.

"I think that we are using the student fees the best way we can. We are very careful how we spend the money."

Edwards also believed that the five dollar fee for intramurals is the best investment they make.

Not only was new equipment purchased but improvements were also made on the intramural fields. The fields which were in terrible shape and dangerous to play on according to Edwards were reseeded and resurfaced.

ATH.

It was an important year in intramurals as the program was expanded, new equipment was purchased, and a permanent director was set up with an intramural office. All of this was possible because of two things, the first was that students were spending five dollars more per quarter for intramurals than in the past and the second was that more people were getting involved in what the program could and did offer.

At the end of the year the P.E. Majors Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma had scored the highest tally for the women's program and Scott Dorm, P.E. Majors, Herb's Superbs and Kappa Alpha had the highest totals in the men's divisions. According to records over 4000 students were involved in some type of intramural activity in winter and fall quarters which was over a third of the school population.

Raising Spirit is Hard Work

The cheerleaders and the Marching Pirates, a total of over two hundred students, spend hours practicing and performing to raise school spirit of the spectators, to support the athletic teams in times of victory or defeat and represent the ECU student body at other campuses.

Unlike the athletic teams, these two groups do not draw crowds nor make thousands of dollars in gate receipts for the university, yet they are very necessary. Without the dedicated individuals that work for nothing who would encourage the team, who would entertain at half-time, and most important of all, who would promote school spirit?

Supported by the athletic department the cheerleaders accompanied the athletic teams to all football games, all home basketball games and most important athletic events. With many new members and new uniforms, the squad performed new and better cheers, according to Pat Kinlaw, head cheerleader.

"Our cheers are similar in style as those done by ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference) cheerleaders. With a larger squad we can perform better cheers, work up good routines and do more difficult stunts," said Kinlaw.

Selected in the spring by a judging committee of ECU coaches and cheerleaders from other universities, the 16 member squad began practicing during the summer for football games. The eight males and females and the alternates had workouts weekly to perfect the routines.

One major change that the student body noticed after the first home game was the lack of the loud speaker which had been used in past years.

"We felt that we really didn't need it. Students complained in the past because they couldn't hear the announcements from the press box. Our squad was larger and with megaphones we could still be heard," said Kinlaw.

Between the fall and winter quarter, the squad faced a problem of training new members for basketball season as several former members graduated or quit. "Despite the turnover we had a good squad winter quarter," Kinlaw commented. "Both squads worked hard at promoting school spirit."

Pirates Receive Standing Ovations

Describing his students as delightful to work with, band director George Naff feels the band has improved in quality during the past three years. Not only has the band grown in number at the rate of 20 a year, it has also grown progressively better.

Funded by the Athletic Department and the Student Government Association, the band attended two away games along with all home games. Performing arrangements of "If," "Make Your Own Kind of Music," "For Once in My Life," and "This Could Be the Start of Something Big," the Marching Pirates received a standing ovation from the spectators in Charlottesville, Va. at the University of Virginia Game. After the halftime show Chancellor Leo Jenkins and Pirate Club President Ira Norfolk commended the band for "being such a fine representation of East Carolina students."

At home games the band played both pregame and halftime shows and added such songs as the alma mater and E.C. Victory to the shows. The most complimented song of the season was an arrangement of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Naff. The National Anthem brought applause and cheers after every performance.

Football games were not the only places the Marching Pirates performed. On the way to Charlottesville, the band put on a demonstration for a Virginia high school. The band also performed for high school students and their directors from North Carolina and Virginia at ECU Band Day. Sponsored by the Pirates, Band Day allows high school bands to enter competition against other schools of equal size. Judging was by specialists, including Pirate assistant directors Carl Rohleder and Jack Fetner, and covered such areas as music, marching, color guard, majorettes, percussion, and drum majors.

Christian

Christian Fellowship was experienced by hundreds of students through active involvement with various campus religious organizations. Activities went beyond worship to include dinners, concerts, lectures, volleyball games and much more. Spring quarter the campus ministers along with some ECU professors organized the "Interfaith Celebration of Religion and the Arts." The celebration included singing, discussions, art presentations and plays by students.

Serving the Student Body

There are over a hundred organizations on campus to which a student can belong. The purposes of the groups vary from academic and honorary to athletic to greek and to service. Those that fall into the latter group all work to serve the student body.

Service organizations include the Student Government, the Student Union, the Residence councils, the honor council, the campus media and special service groups such as the Veteran's club, NCSL, and Real House volunteers. Each of these groups contribute their time and efforts for the student body.

Not only has the student government passed laws and appropriated money, they have also sponsored departmental retreats, investigated student's rights, worked on revising the dorm contracts, held symposiums and much more. The SGA is a group of concerned students that made decisions for what they felt was the good of the entire student body.

The residence councils were another governing group that worked for the students. The MRC and WRC offered programs for the dorm students including dances, dinners and contests. Jointly they published a campus directory. The MRC maintained a study hall, a games room and offered athletic equipment. The WRC recognized a hundred outstanding women students during women's awareness week.

The student union, composed of student volunteers, planned entertainment for the student body. All aspects of programming from concerts to lectures to films were accomplished by students with the assistance of program directors. Vincent Price, James Taylor, Disney World, Last Tango in Paris, W.C. Fields were just part of the wide variety offered to the student body through the student union.

The staffs of the campus media produced two newspapers, (Foun- tainhead and Ebony Herald), a literary magazine (the Rebel), a yearbook (the BUCCANEER), and radio shows for the benefit of the students as a means to keep them informed about the campus.

Many of these groups work together to serve the students especially during campus wide activities such as homecoming and elections. At times it seems they are working against each other as do publications and the SGA but each is doing their own job and they must be carried out despite the conflicts with others that serve the students.

Honeycutt Administration Faced Numerous Problems

The first coalition to run for student government offices faced problems within the administration.

The Honeycutt, Brown, Chesson coalition came into office in May of 1975 amid cries of election violations. It was discovered that President Honeycutt's fraternity brothers had not only manned the ballot boxes but also counted the votes.

At the beginning of fall quarter the spring elections were forgotten as fall elections for class officers and legislative seats were charged with violations. The judiciary committee of the SGA had rewritten the election laws after the Spring election. After the fall election was over it was announced in the Fountainhead that the new rules had not been followed and the elections "were carried out in a shoddy manner." Ballot boxes were not placed in the specified locations, poll tenders were uninformed as to voting procedures and often gave voters wrong information, names were left off ballots, and some poll tenders were reported to have been campaign workers.

Many candidates filed protests with the Elections committee when it was possible as complaints had to be made within 24 hours of the elections and the results were not known until after that time.

President Honeycutt praised the election workers for a job well done and commented that elections "can't be perfect down to the last detail." A run-off election was held in the case where a name had been left off the ballot but all others were ignored. Honeycutt called one complaint invalid and from a sore loser. The candidate lost the office by only 18 votes and as a P.E. Major felt that the elections were not fair as there was no voting box in Minges as stated in the election rules.

Comments continued all year about the elections and students wondered how the Spring officers election would be conducted. Learning from experience the Elections committee had ballot boxes in every required location with informed and unbiased poll tenders. All candidates were informed of the election rules and some were disqualified prior to the elections for violation of the rules. Three presidential candidates were charged with violations but without an attorney general no ruling could be made. None of the candidates which won had over 50 percent of the votes (except the office of secretary) When the Attorney general was appointed he declared the candidates with the most votes the winner of the presidential race before the election, the legislature would have to impeach the president-elect as he could not be disqualified.

In early September the student government treasurer announced a surplus of $148,000 in the SGA treasury which had accumulated over the past three years. Three months later it was announced that there had been a mistake made and that the SGA had $95,000 less than previously reported. In a report made to the legislature by the Appropriations committee Larry Chesson was blamed for the mistake. Chesson worked all year keeping track of appropriations and incoming activity fees and mistakes do happen but Chesson failed to consult advisors which could have corrected the mistake sooner according to the committee report.

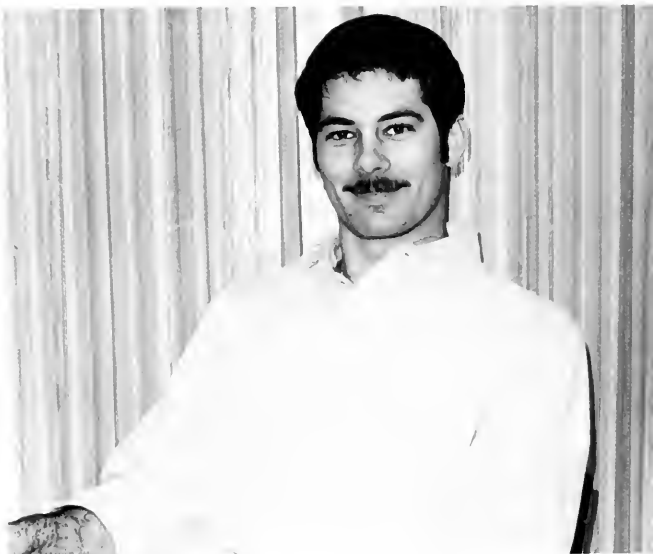

Another problem of the Honeycutt administration was the frequent vacancies of cabinet officers. A new Attorney General had to be appointed each quarter and in the case of Spring quarter there was not one to rule on the election charges until after the election.

Vice President Brown dropped out of school fall quarter and there was no replacement made although the constitution requires a vacancy to be filled by election within three weeks. A ruling was not made until January about filling the office and by then it was decided to wait until Spring elections.

In other actions the Student Government had a productive legislature (story on p. 224) and worked in other ways to benefit the students (Story on p. 222).

Consumer Program Publishes "Food for Thought"

In its second year of operation the Consumer Program published a guide to restaurants for students. The program is under the SGA's Student Welfare and tried to give students helpful hints on consumerism.

"Food for Thought" was a booklet about most of the restaurants in the Greenville area and some in other nearby cities. The guide is helpful by indicating the kind of food served, the hours of business and whether or not checks are accepted. The guide was distributed to all students during fall quarter registration.

The consumer office is working on a similar guide to apartments in Greenville as over a third of the student body lives off campus.

The office also offers pamphlets with consumer tips which are made available through the U.S. Government. It serves as a consumer bureau as students who have complaints about Greenville businesses can go to the consumer office and report the complaint. If possible the complaint is investigated.

SGA Bus Involved in Accident

Special From Fountainhead By Dennis Leonard

In a pre-Christmas mishap, an SGA transportation bus scraped the side of ECU student David Aman's car while it was parked at the intersection of Ninth and Charles Streets.

The driver of the bus who struck Aman's car left a note attached to the windshield giving instruction on reporting the accident. Aman went directly to the SGA Transportation office and was assured that he would receive the restitution from the SGA.

"Greg Davis informed me to get two damage estimates and return them to him and I would receive payment," said Aman. "During the Christmas break I rode around for four hours trying to get two estimates that came to $139.00 and $144.00.

"When I returned the estimates to Greg Davis, he said he couldn't believe the estimates and would offer me $50.00 for restitution," said Aman. "I felt that I couldn't accept that for fixing my car and Davis referred me to Jimmy Honeycutt, SGA President.

"Honeycutt told me that he would uphold Davis' decision and if I wanted any more money that I would have to take them to court.

"The next time I went back to meet with Davis, he told me that I was illegally parked and that the SGA would not pay for the damages. During the three weeks I was dealing with Davis he never mentioned that I was illegally parked.

"I next went to see Dr. Tucker, dean of Student Affairs, and he said that it was not up to Davis and Honeycutt to come up with an arbitrary figure like that for restitution and it did not matter if I was illegally parked or not.

"Dr. Tucker postponed our meeting until January 27th. The second meeting with Dr. Tucker was not any clearer than the first.

"Dr. Tucker said that he did not realize that the value of my car was so low and referred me to Joe Calder, director of ECU Campus Security. Now through almost two months of meetings and red tape, I still haven't reached a settlement with the transportation department.

"Greg Davis also added during one of the many meetings he preferred a cash settlement to keep the SGA insurance from going up.

I feel that there has been an injustice served against me because I was promised restitution and so far have received nothing," said Aman.

Greg Davis explained that there was a line item expressly set aside in the transportation budget for making restitutions in minor acci-

Transit System

A new program on campus under the SGA was operating successfully in the second-year of existence. The transit system funded by SGA through student fees operates buses for student use.

Greg Davis is manager of the bus system and is a student as are all drivers. That is one of several benefits of the system—that students can be employed.

Another benefit is that the buses provide a means of transportation to other campuses, Minges and Allied Health, and to the apartment complexes. This enables students to get to and from class if they live off campus without driving so there is more parking spaces for other day students that must drive.

The SGA operates two buses five days a week, ten hours a day. One bus goes to apartments and the other goes around campus. The buses are available to student organizations or weekends for retreats and field trips.

dents. "The line item amount is approximately $1,000 to cover any accidents that may occur, and is there to keep our insurance rate down," said Davis.

"I feel the $50.00 restitution is more than a fair amount due to the age of the car, the extent of damage, and the circumstances involved," said Davis. "First of all the car is a 1964 model, secondly, the extent of damages was two scraped places on the fender and a dent in the bumper, and finally the guy was illegally parked.

"Aman is trying to take advantage of the SGA and is actually trying to take money from the students in a sense," said Davis. "I feel it would be unfair to other students if Aman was given full restitution for the slight damage on his car."

Eventually after much response from the student body the SGA did agree to pay David Aman $150.00 to cover damages however Aman could not be located.

Legislature Investigates Students' Rights

The legislature of the Student Government Association (SGA) consisted of approximately fifty full-time students who met weekly to govern the student body.

The major accomplishment of the legislature in 1975 was the establishment of the Organization for Student Rights (ORS) as a result of the Halloween Riot in Greenville. Because of the in-depth investigation conducted by a legislative committee headed by Tim Sullivan, charges against most of the riot victims were dropped. The SGA legislature investigated the matter much more thoroughly than the Greenville Press. Of the 56 persons arrested, only 12 were bound over for trial and eventually those people also had their charges dropped.

As a result of the riot, the legislature organized the ORS which will study the rights of students in any future legal matters on or off campus. The legislature also worked with Jerry Paul, a well-known criminal attorney, on the possibility of suing the Police of Greenville for violating individual rights.

A major outcome of the riot was a non-voting seat on the Greenville City Council for an ECU student.

Of over 60 bills which went through the legislature on appropriations, judiciary, academic affairs and student welfare, the most controversial bill was the appropriation of funds to campus publications. The battle between the press and the government raged for several weeks. The outcome was a compromise for both groups. The campus publications receive money to operate on, but not enough in some cases. The Rebel, the campus literary magazine was only published once, rather than the usual three times because of "lack of student interest" according to the legislature. The Publications Center was denied a secretary to work for all publications and the Fountainhead, the campus paper turned over all ad revenue to the SGA funds. Although the legislature did allocate operating funds totaling over $142,000, one third of the overall SGA budget, some felt that was not enough.

As a result of Title IX and because it is an "old conglomeration of amendments and differing ideas," according to Speaker of the House Ricky Price, the legislature undertook the task of rewriting and updating the SGA constitution to make it efficient.

The legislature operated on a budget of over $300,000 and spent much of it on campus organizations and departmental retreats. The retreats were begun in 1975 by the legislature as a way to improve relations between students and faculty within the departments.

NCSL Receives Honorable Mention at State Convention

The ECU delegation of the North Carolina Student Legislature (NCSL) received honorable mention recognition last month during the state convention of NCSL in Raleigh.

SERVICE

Steve Nobles, chairman of the ECU delegation at that time, was elected Speaker of the House during the convention.

The honorable mention recognition means ECU had one of the top two delegations at the convention.

Over 30 North Carolina colleges and universities are represented in NCSL.

Legislation introduced during the recent state convention ran the gamut.

ECU's bill concerned "euthanasia" (mercy killing). It was one the most debated and controversial of the bills.

ECU's secondary bill pertained to voter registration by mail.

Bill topics from other schools included malpractice insurance for doctors, compensations for victims of crimes, and modifications for the "steel jaw" (animal) traps to make it more humane.

Also, there were bills dealing with sex and crime, alcohol and taxes.

College Republicans Reorganize

Due to the decline of interest in political parties the College Republicans prepared a rebuilding campaign. It was their purpose to stimulate interest in the government and to encourage people to vote. The club tried to inform people of the Republican party's platform.

Members of the club included are Billy Epps, Bob Murrill, Ricky Smith, Ron

 The Young Democrats Club objectives are to stimulate in young people an active interest in governmental affairs and to help acquaint voters and potential voters with the issues and candidates. At ECU, we try to meet these objectives by presenting programs and guest speakers that will be of interest to the student body.

the entertainer

Over 100 students work in the Student Union programming entertainment for the student body. The students compose a programming body which considers all forms of entertainment from travel and recreation to pop concerts and cultural performances, according to Diane Taylor, union president.

Operating on a budget of $145,000 the union offers free flicks weekly, major attractions such as James Taylor, special concerts such as Michael Murphy, trips to places like New York and Florida, lectures, theatrical productions such as "1776," and many other forms of entertainment.

As an independently governed body the Student Union of East Carolina has one of the "most unique and most admired organizations in the country," in the words of Ms. Taylor. "We also have one of the largest budgets of any university."

The union is funded through a percentage of activity fees ($6.00 per student per quarter) which enables students to attend most performances free. Some big name acts, however, require ticket sales to both the student body and the public.

The union consists of twelve committees which are responsible for looking at possible means of recreation and performances. All committees are students which are selected by chairpersons appointed by the president. The union has a board of directors in ultimate control. Program Directors Ken Hammond and Tana Nobles contact the booking agencies after a committee makes some decisions. After contracts are approved by Rudolph Alexander, associate dean of student affairs, a date is set and the performance is scheduled to appear on campus.

The only problem faced by the union in 1975 was the cancellation of the Ike and Tina Turner Concert. The union lost over $2,000 on publicity and ticket sales. According to Alexander, the union has filed a claim with the American Federation of Musicians for reimbursement as the performers failed to keep their part of the contract.

Each committee is involved with a special aspect of entertainment and the members work together to schedule programs which will meet the wide interests of the student body. (For coverage of activities mentioned see pages 60-89.)

VIDEO TAPE COMMITTEE

A new style of entertainment was introduced in 1974 by the Video Tape Committee. A variety of films, sports events, old tv shows and concerts could be seen on the video tape machine located in the recreation center of Mendenhall.

The committee was plagued with mechanical failures in 1975 which prevented full time operations. The video tape usually ran one show for a week thus supplying students with something to watch other than the soap operas and game shows on commercial tv. Programming which drew large crowds included Amos and Andy, Heavyweight Championship Fights and Jim Croce.

SPECIAL CONCERTS

Special Concerts committee tried to bridge the gap in entertainment between the Coffeehouse and Major Attractions. They scheduled bands on their way up that would be in a higher price range in a couple of years.

Tom Rush, Susan and Richard Thomas, Morning Song, Michael Murphey, Monty Alexander, Leo Kottle and Gene Cotton all performed at ECU as a result of the Special Concert Committee. A major event of the year was the Bluegrass Festival.

ARTIST SERIES

Cultural and musical attractions presented at ECU are the result of programming by the Artists Series Committee. Artist series performances provide cultural education and entertainment with a wide variety of events. Various ensembles, a concert pianist, a vocalist, a flutist and guitarist performed this season under the Student Union Artists Series Program.

RECREATION COMMITTEE

All recreation on campus outside of the intramural and athletic programs are sponsored by the Student Union Recreation Committee. Ice Cream Bingo, Octoberfest, the Annual American College Union International Preliminary Games are regular events programmed by the committee.

A soap-box derby, a flea market, frisbee ralleys and a kite derby were introduced to the recreational program in the spring.

The committee members (Below) for 1975-76 were Bruce Whitten, Chairperson, Loretta Adams, Bob Clark, Sue Cook, Linda Davis, Richard Drogos, Fraysure Fulton, Keith Gray, Marion Moylette and Advisor Lindsay Overton.

ART EXHIBITION COMMITTEE

The newest committee in the Student Union began in the fall of 1975 with a new gallery donated by the class of '75. The committee selected the logo "Illumina" to represent their exhibits "which enlighten" the viewing audience.

Exhibits included the "Sunday Afternoon Dabler" featuring the work of Chancellor Jenkins, contemporary posters, "Indian Images" featuring photos of American Indians from 1850's-1930's, modern sculpture and much more of both students and professionals.

TRAVEL COMMITTEE

Low cost trips for ECU students and faculty during Thanksgiving and Easter breaks are organized by the travel committee.

Over the Thanksgiving holiday 46 students traveled to New York. Disneyworld was the destination during Easter.

COFFEE HOUSE

Providing a quiet atmosphere for students to enjoy music was the objective of the Coffee-house committee. The music, far removed from contemporary commercial music was performed in a unique atmosphere. The small room in the Recreation center of Mendenhall created an intimacy between the audience and such performers as Sally Spring, Tim Bays, Mike Thompson and many talented students.

SERVICE

FILMS

Selecting popular films for Friday night and international and classics for Wednesday night was the task of the Films committee. The selection of Friday movies was so popular that three and sometimes four showings were given rather than two. Some of the movies were "Last Tango in Paris," "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice," "The Great Waldo Pepper," "2001" "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" "Paper Moon," "Airport," and "The Reivers." Classics included Clark Gable, Superman, Vincent Price and The Little Rascals film festivals and Macbeth. The committee was pleased with student response to the movies as almost all were shown to a full house.

LECTURE

Lois Lane, Bob Katz, Mr. Zodiac and Gil Eagles were among the performers brought by the Lecture committee. The committee was also responsible for presenting Travel-Adventure film series such as Mark Twain in Italy.

The committee members (not pictured) were Willie Harvey — chairperson, and Susan Bittner.

MAJOR ATTRACTIONS

Linda Ronstadt and James Taylor were two highlights for the Major Attractions committee. The committee selected and promoted major concerts at ECU. The last minute cancellation of the Ike and Tina Turner concert scheduled for Homecoming was a problem for the committee but eventually they were reimbursed for expenses. Other concerts included Joe Cocker.

The committee members (Left) were: Bob Seraiva — chairperson, Mike Taylor, Tom McQuade, Dan Wright, John Evans, John Whitlow and Nancy Moore.

THEATRE ARTS

Devoted to the promotion and presentation of professional theatre the Theatre Arts committee sponsored "1776" the award winning Broadway musical, Vincent Price in "Three American Voices" and the Royal Shakespeare Company in "The Hollow Crown."

MINORITY ARTS

The Minority Arts committee was responsible for selecting and promoting minority arts programs to meet the needs of minority students on campus.

The committee members (Left) were Aldriche Z. Davidson — chairperson, Betty Ellis, Helena Woodard, Grover Cooper, Mildred Ramsey

Publications Study Independence

Due to the many problems the Publications Board faced, a study was conducted to consider alternative means of funding campus publications.

The problems of the board centered around its involvement with the Student Government. Although the board was an objective body composed of seven voting members (all students) of which three were legislators, it was not respected by the rest of the SGA. The legislature from the beginning considered the board biased in favor of publications because two of its members were former editors. Because of this attitude all actions of the board were attacked by the legislature and had to be reviewed again.

Such was the case of the Publications by-laws. When they were introduced to the legislature they were treated like any other campus organization. Eventually someone discovered that the Board was a SGA committee which meant that the by-laws need only be amended. Amendments were passed by the legislature and vetoed by President Jimmy Honeycutt, not because of the proposed changes but because of a clause guaranteeing financial support. The clause was a part of the original by-laws which date back to 1970.

After the by-law amendments were vetoed, the board continued to operate under the old by-laws which the legislature ignored although the Pub Board by-laws are SGA by-laws.

The SGA refused to accept the proposed publications budget because in the opinion of SGA members, the board had not done an adequate job of cutting the budgets. As a result, after the editors were cross-examined by the appropriations committee several times as well as the legislature, publications were denied several items. Two denials were in direct conflict with the by-laws and concerned advertising revenue of the Fountainhead (by-laws required money to go to the publication not to the SGA), a second issue of the Rebel (by-laws require three), and a full time secretary for the Publications Center to answer the phone and take messages when the students are in class.

The by-laws were further violated when the legislature appropriated money to the Ebony Herald a black newspaper without the board's approval. The Herald was the topic of many discussions concerning the board's by-laws. At one point the Herald Staff was considering petitioning the board for membership but when the new editor was selected this proposal was dropped as the Herald was satisfied with being independent.

One action was taken by the legislature, however, and that was to turn over the responsibility of the photography lab and the photographers from the SGA to the board. This action put a committee in charge of equipment in the lab and prevented theft and misuse of university equipment.

The study conducted concerned other schools in the North and South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky area. Through a survey it was determined how publications were funded on various campuses, who sold ads, how much publications cost the students and how the media board, if any, was composed.

The study indicated that most schools the size of ECU operated publications and other campus media separate from the student government with a controlling board of students and faculty.

As a result of the study, independence of campus publications was a major issue in student body elections. Of the 2,500 students that voted, two-thirds voted for candidates supporting independence and one third voted for those opposed.

Tim Sullivan the new student body president is completely opposed to the media separating from the SGA. He feels that the board should remain under the SGA and become stronger.

At the end of spring quarter, publication by-laws were rewritten by the legislature and passed out favorably. The by-laws had been submitted in January with amendments by the board. Most amendments were disregarded and the legislature rewrote the by-laws giving the SGA more control and publications had no say in the issue. For that and several other reasons the new by-laws were vetoed by Sullivan and hopes were that by fall of '77 a completely new system could be organized and put into effect.

The Rebel

Campus Literary Magazine Unsuccessful in Goal for Two Issues

The Rebel Staff fought numerous obstacles in their effort to produce the campus literary-art magazine. Condensed to only three people in an effort to save money the staff fought unsuccessfully for two issues.

"A couple of year's ago The Rebel was published each quarter and was accepted by the students," Jeff Rollins, editor, told the SGA when he asked for two issues.

"The Rebel, serves as a vital and communicative link between the creative forces on campus and the rest of the students and faculty," according to Rollins and "it is not as the SGA claims a production of the English department and the School of Art as students from every field contribute."

Rollins said there was enough creative work to demand two issues and sponsored a contest to prove it. The response was overwhelming and due to limited space all of the material could not even be considered for publication.

When the budget was up before the legislature, Ovid Pierce, ECU's writer in residence, addressed the governing body on the need for good campus publications. Mr. Pierce received a standing ovation from the floor but a few minutes later one freshman co-ed cried out that "I don't know what a Rebel is and I don't care to know because I'm not going to vote for it anyway."

When the vote was called the legislature forgot that the Rebel has won All American awards for the past four years and they forgot the words of Mr. Pierce they had applauded earlier.

Not only was the Rebel budget cut in half so only one issue could be published but the salaries were cut back to only half an academic year because the SGA felt with only one issue the staff did not need to work longer than four months to produce the magazine. Then salaries were also cut in amount.

Despite the SGA and the suggestion to dissolve the publication completely a Rebel was published.

Fountainhead

SERVICE

The campus newspaper doubled in size compared to the FOUNTAINHEADS of the past. Publishing two 24-28 page papers per week the all student staff worked hard to cover all that was happening on campus.

In coverage, the Fountainhead and the SGA conducted a thorough investigation of the Halloween riot. Other important stories covered included ECU's withdrawal from the Southern Conference, SGA elections, the death of Athletic Director Clarence Stasavich, the progress of the medical school, publications independence, rape and more.

Not only did the Fountainhead inform the students of the activities on campus, it also saved the students thousands of dollars. The advertising revenue for the paper was over $30,000 which went back into the SGA budget. The Fountainhead also received some new machines valued at $11,000. The machines were a gift to the university and saved the campus paper several thousand dollars by not having to rent similar machines each year.

The paper celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a special issue noting the changes in ECU since the Tech Echo (the original name of the paper) was founded. The paper also took on a new logo "serving the East Carolina Community for over fifty years."

The staff met with objections from the student body when they tried to change the name of the paper. Editor Mike Taylor said Fountainhead was no longer relevant to the paper or the campus since the paper had moved from its office from above the fountain to the publications center.

The majority of the students that voiced an opinion felt otherwise, to them to change the name of the paper was to change tradition.

Another controversy arose over the April Fool's issue of the paper, the Fountainblah. One eastern North Carolina editor claimed it was "a source of embarrassment" for those who attended ECU and called it "a disgrace to the institution" in an editorial. The editor went on to say that he would not hire anyone who was associated with the campus paper.

The staff was surprised at such comments because they were from someone not related to the campus. Little criticism was heard by those the paper ridiculed on campus. The Board of Trustees even discussed the

Residence Councils Publish Student Directory

The living environment of dorm students was the major concern of the residence councils. Consisting of dorm representatives, the residence councils sponsor programs and provide entertainment facilities for all campus residents.

The two groups worked together to publish a campus directory listing names, addresses and phone numbers for all students, faculty and offices. The directory was a project of the Student Government but was dropped a couple of years ago. The directory costs over $2700 and was paid for through the social fees of dorm students and advertising.

The Women's Residence Council (WRC) coordinated many activities for women students including some socials with the Men's Residence Council (MRC). Both groups worked together to raise money in February for the Heart Fund.

The WRC sponsored Women's Awareness Week in April. The major event of the WRC recognizes outstanding women students in each department on campus and awards certificates at a special ceremony.

A Horn of Plenty Dance was held just before Thanksgiving by the WRC. Another project of the women's council was a speaker's forum which brought speakers from various fields to talk on such topics as rape, fashion, decorating, study habits, and careers.

The WRC also sponsored a Maid of Cotton representative. Ms. Lynn Yow from Umstead dorm was selected to represent ECU and went on to become one of the top ten finalists.

One project of the WRC does not involve ECU students but represents them. The WRC sponsored an orphan in the Philippines by sending money, letters and gifts.

The MRC gave a dinner on College Hill after the Homecoming game for all men dorm students. Another successful project was the establishment of a study-hall in the basement of Jones dorm. Student used the hall regularly and hours had to be expanded winter quarter to accommodate all residents on the hill.

A proposal was made by the MRC to name the streets on campus so directions could be followed more easily. The council also hoped to begin a traditional UMOC (Ugly Man on Campus) Contest and give all proceeds to charity.

Students can check out sports equipment from the MRC for individual or group use. The equipment included footballs, basketballs, softballs, canoes, ping pong paddles and balls. The MRC maintained a games room in the basement of Aycock and provided pinball and football machines and ping pong tables. The council also maintained the color tvs, ice machines and Christmas decorations for each dorm.

The MRC and WRC not only provide educational and social activities for dorm students but also represent them in student affairs. Both councils have an executive board of officers and an advisor. The councils are composed of the executives officers and two representatives from each dorm which head up each individual house council.

Greeks Serve Campus and Community

In the past couple of years the various Greek organizations at East Carolina have contributed their time and efforts to bring about many changes on campus as well as in the community. Every fraternity and sorority has some type of project that gives food and clothes to the needy, assistance in Big brother/sister programs, and money to various international funds. Whether it be rocking in a chair for three consecutive days or standing on a street corner ringing the Salvation Army bell at Christmas time or donating blood to the blood bank a Greek has always been willing to lend a helping hand.

On campus the Greeks' influence has been felt for as long as the Greeks have been here. The SGA is over 50% Greek and other campus committees and organizations have their share. Every facet of East Carolina's lifestyle has active Greek participation.

Many people are not interested in the Greeks way of life and have found many other opportunities that the university provides to fulfill their needs and time. The Greeks are no different than anyone else and they will be the first to admit it. They become a Greek to meet their own needs and desires as individuals.

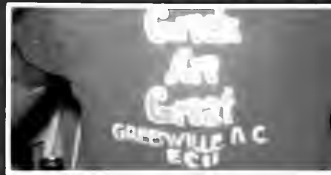

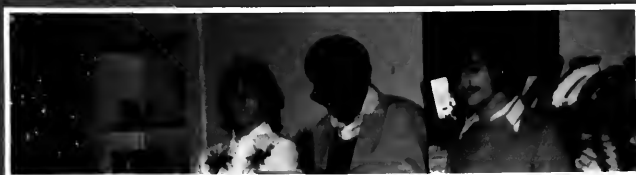

That is the key to Greeks. Time is essential to everything and one must be ready to devote time and effort for a rewarding cause. For individuals that feel a desire to be close to someone and to help people and also have a good time the Greeks are a way of life for them.

Some people say that Greeks are nothing by hellraisers and that all they do is have socials. Greeks work hard for the community as well as the campus and socials are their own rewards. When socials and other parties are sponsored by the Greeks the members go all out just as they do for a worthwhile cause.

The most rewarding facet of Greek life is the lasting friendships that are made. Being a Greek means constant involvement with new and different people. Greeks form a permanent relationship of brotherhoods and sisterhoods for its members. Greeks which live in houses are closer than the average dorm students because they are more actively involved in so many activities. Greeks have become a standard part of campus life and ECU wouldn't be the same without them.

Panhellenic Council Recognizes Outstanding Sisters With Banquet

Over thirty awards were given to outstanding girls and sororities at the annual Panhellenic Scholarship Banquet.

Mrs. R. M. Palmer, National Panhellenic Council area advisor was the guest speaker. Mrs. Palmer (Left) who has been a part of the Greek system for over twenty years delivered an impressive speech which challenged the sisters to continue to strive for their goals.

Entertainment was provided by Nourhon Mansour, a talented Alpha Omicron Pi singer.

Twelve girls were then initiated into Rho Lambda the honor society for Greeks.

Lise Turner presented the scholarship awards which included: most improved sorority scholarship went to Delta Zeta, the Panhellenic Scholarship Trophy to Chi Omega, (Opposite Page Top Right) the highest overall average to Margaret Stevens and the Highest Pledge Average to Robin Hammond, a Delta Zeta.

Perhaps the most important award went to a very special person. The Hera award for the most outstanding alumna went to Miss Velma Low, the housemother of Chi Omega.

Twelve girls became members of the Greek Hall of Fame. Paula Culbreth received an award for being the Outstanding Greek Sister. Tamma Flarety (Below) was given special recognition as was Pam Holt (Below Left).

Nine girls were recipients of the Artemis award which is given to sisters who are dedicated to sisterhood as a way of life. They were Jaime Pucket — Alpha Delta Pi, Sheila Bunch — Alpha Kappa Alpha, Marsha Murphy — Alpha Omicron Pi, Sheila Seymour — Alpha Phi, Debbie Harrington — Alpha Xi Delta, Tamma Flarety — Chi Omega, Paula Culbreth — Delta Zeta, Cathy Gentry — Kappa Delta, and Lise Turner — Sigma Sigma Sigma.

Editors Note:

Each sorority and fraternity was given one free page with the option to buy a second page, therefore some greeks have more space than others. Also each group was given the opportunity to have a picture made by a professional photographer which explains the difference in some group pictures and why some groups have no picture. Some groups failed to submit necessary information by a given deadline which resulted in no rosters or activities listed.

Summer of '75

"We have opened a new era in the history of man."
U.S. Astronaut Thomas Stafford.

On July 17 the Apollo and Soyuz space crafts linked in space as a symbolic gesture between the U.S. and U.S.S.R. to cooperate in Space exploration. U.S. astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald Slayton met with U.S.S.R. cosmonauts Aleksei A. Leonov and Valery N. Kubasov for two days in space. Both space crafts returned to earth safely.

General Robert E. Lee, commander of the Confederate forces in the Civil War was restored U.S. citizenship on July 22, by Congress 110 years after he applied. Lee's file had been misplaced and was not discovered until 1970.

It was disclosed in mid-July by the Rockefeller Commission in their report of CIA activities that the CIA had conducted LSD experiments in the fifties.

The former president of Kent State and 27 Ohio National Guardsmen were acquitted on Aug. 27 of all responsibility of the Kent State shootings of 1970.

Locally, Joan Little was acquitted by a Raleigh jury on Aug. 15 on the charge of 2nd degree murder in the Aug. 1974 stabbing death of Beaufort County jailer Clarence T. Alligood. Ms. Little had been accused of killing Alligood to escape from jail where she was awaiting trial for breaking and entering.

Federal judges ruled the North Carolina use of the National Teacher Exam unconstitutionally discriminatory on Aug. 28. The state was ordered to give licenses to those persons qualified to teach but failed to score the N.C. required minimum of 950 on the test.

The movie and book "Jaws" created a shark craze along the east coast. As a result the N.C. tourist trade increased along the coastal region and Outer Banks as fisherman came from all over to try to get a shark.

The worst single aircraft disaster in U.S. history occurred June 24 when an Eastern Airlines jet crashed at Kennedy airport in New York killing 113 and injuring 11.

Deaths of prominent persons during the summer:

Ozzie Nelson, 68, a band leader and star of the "Ozzie and Harriet," tv show died June 3 in Cal.

Lefty Frizzell, 47, country singer died July 19 in Nashville, Tenn.

Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, 77, who replied "Nuts" to the German ultimatum to surrender in 1944 died Aug. 11 in Washington, D.C.

Vladimir Kuts, 48, Soviet gold medal winner in 1956 Olympics died Aug. 16 in U.S.S.R.

Mark Donohue, 38, winner of the 1972 Indianapolis 500 died Aug. 19 in Austria.

September

September 4 was registration day at ECU and over 11,000 students enrolled fall quarter yet 700,000 students stayed out of public schools due to teachers on strike in 10 states. The worst areas were Pennsylvania, Illinois and New York as 40,000 teachers across the nation went on strike to protest wages, class size, textbooks, and benefits.

Public schools continued to be in the news as busing created problems in Louisville and Boston. Over 500 persons were arrested in Louisville and 50 were injured while extensive property damage was sustained in anti-busing demonstrations. # LIFE AT THE UNIVERSITY

BY E.C. PIRATE

Allow me to introduce myself. I'm E.C. Pirate. Some people call me the spirit of this university. Others simply think of me as a mascot. I prefer to think of myself as an integral part of this institution of higher learning. I am not a member of the student body, faculty or administration yet I am a part of each.

My presence is, felt everywhere, in the dorm, in the classroom, on the mall, downtown, at the C.U. That brings me to the purpose of this story. I think it is time someone put down in writing how life goes on at a university. Because I am everywhere and therefore see and hear all that occurs, I take it upon myself to tell the world about life at this university.

So here is my story.

It all began on September 4, 1975 when 11,725 individuals arrived at East Carolina for registration. They came from 19 countries and 41 states. They were in all shapes and sizes and had 11,725 opinions on how things should be done on campus. They waited in line for hours, (an requirement of all college students that doesn't end until graduation is over). There were lines for registering, for phones, for room keys, for tuition, for everything.

The mass that invaded the university from 11,725 worlds had one thing in common at the end of the day, all were students at East Carolina University. They were united because they shared a goal — to learn.

The first week was a flurry of activity. Students began to settle in their rooms, make new friends, reassociated with old ones and to get familiar with their new surroundings and Greenville which would be "home" for four years. After spending a fortune for text books that could not be resold, students adjusted to the routine of classes. Due to the thoughtfulness of instructors, students discovered they were a week behind on the first day of class and quickly got settled down to the serious business of studying.

Studying may be important to students and it is certainly necessary on a college campus, but so is relaxing. Students are only human and can't study all the time so it didn't take long for individuals to discover various ways on avoiding the books. Others not having the leisure time to spend on the mall found another common pastime — drinking.

Life at the university is classes, professors, dorms, parties, friends, headaches, and laughter. It is a good life full of experiences from which students can learn. College is not just a place to get an academic education. It is also a place to learn about life and the great experience of living. (My story will continue on the following pages with photos of life at the university and my comments concerning life at ECU.)

A co-ed awaits the opening of Drop-Add on the steps of Wright. Drop-Add is a procedure all students end up going through before graduation.

The Class of '77 will be the last class at East Carolina University to graduate on the quarter system. Most of these students entered in the fall of 1973. Others transferred this year from junior and community colleges. All have decided on a major field of study and many have an idea about their future. The Class of '77 experienced the streaking craze their first year on campus and several policy changes regarding curfew and dorm regulations.

SENIORS

CLASS OF '76

The graduating seniors in 1976 have spent four long and hard years working for their degrees be it a teaching degree or a Bachelor of arts degree. The class entered in the fall of '72 amid the Presidential campaign and the Watergate scandal. They witnessed the first Homecoming win in five years and it was a victory over the N. C. State Wolfpack.

Also on the following pages are the outstanding seniors recognized by Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Graduate School — Is It Worth the Cost?

by Dawn Bledsoe

Today, a student getting a Master of Arts degree faces a new and common problem, that of over-qualification.

It used to be that any sort of higher degree made the graduate more desirable to the prospective employer. Now, however, with the present economic situation and the variety of degrees available to more and more people, a graduate student could find that he has spent at least one year of his life and $1750 of his money to get mis-educated.

Because of the increase of college graduates, and fewer job openings, finding a job is difficult for someone just out of college with little or no experience. Many students have found that a Bachelor of Science or a Bachelor of Arts is all that is necessary to get a job. A degree that is more specialized than necessary such as a MA may be the reason the student doesn't get the job he wants.

Mr. Furney K. James, director of the placement office at ECU, suggests that students work for a year or two between receiving the B.A. and going on for the M.A. as the work experience would make the degree more relevant.

Another factor to consider is the economic situation of the day. Even if some companies would prefer someone with an M.A. degree, they may hire someone with a B.A. because the lesser degree does not require the higher salaries. This could prevent a qualified graduate from getting a potentially good job, simply by being "over-qualified."

In spite of the problems involved, most graduate students and professors feel that a Master of Arts degree will make the graduate more employable and better prepared for his future job.

Graduate Students Have No Student Benefits

by Dennis Foster

Graduates students in ECU are considered students only while in the classroom and have little or no access of campus facilities and campus oriented activities.

Phil Arrington, a graduate student in English, said lack of infirmary care is one problem.

"Those of us in the grad school live through the winter in constant fear that we'll contract flu, or some other sickness, and be forced to spend our food money on medical bills," said Arrington.

"Since the majority of grad students are classified as part time students, the infirmary will not treat them," said Arrington.

This means that they must seek medical attention off campus at a much higher cost.

"Of the 1,500 students currently enrolled in graduate programs at ECU, 1,300 are considered part-time students. A part-time student isn't allowed to pay activity fees which means they have no voice in the SGA," said Arrington.

Other drawbacks of being a part-time grad student include paying full public admission price for all concerts, Playhouse productions, athletic events and other campus sponsored activities, and being barred from the free films and guest speakers.

"In relation to anything sponsored by the school, we are treated as the general public," said Arrington.

"The SGA is currently considering the placement of a graduate student representative within its framework," said Arrington.

"I think grad students should be allowed to vote in campus related matters or have a full-time graduate student representative in the SGA," said Arrington.

The threat of rain forced commencement exercises to be held in Minges Coliseum for the first time in several years. Normally held in Ficklen Stadium the ceremony of graduating from college was witnessed by hundreds of family members as 2,842 students received their degree from East Carolina on May 30, 1976.

Dr. Lloyd Elliot, President of George Washington University delivered the address. Elliot told the audience that the federal government was trying to take over the process of education. He warned that "some governmental groups are working on new regulatory measures which are taking away most of the intellectual freedoms of today's colleges and universities."

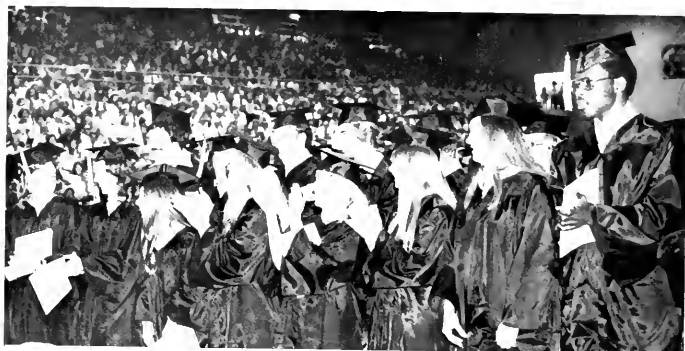

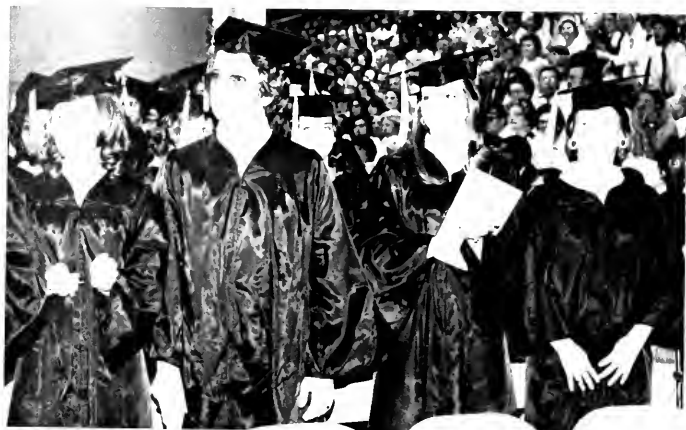

Elliot said that "educational formulas were better off being left in the classroom than in the halls of government. He is admittedly worried about "federal legislation that has taken away the autonomy of colleges and universities."

"Learning is a highly individualized matter. It remains for all of us to preserve it for all Americans," he concluded.

Dr. Lloyd Elliot Addresses 2,842 Graduates in Minges

After the ceremony was over many students were happily congratulated by parents and friends. The day was an important one for all persons involved as it marked the end of school and a new beginning for the graduates.

One often asks after an important event is over "Where do I go from here?" For the over 2800 persons that graduated on May 30 the answers are varied. Many will seek jobs in their particular field, others in another field. Still others will return to school for the Masters or PhD. Others, less fortunate however, will be again standing in a line — the unemployment line — as the job market fails to produce enough work for the ever increasing number of qualified graduates.

The graduates varied in age from 22 to 54, some were single, some married with families and some stepped across the threshold of matrimony shortly after their graduation.

After Graduation — Then What? you may ask. Then comes the rest of a lifetime — short or long, good or bad, hard or easy, happy or sad — but at least a life that will grow and learn from experience. It will be a life like the thousands that came before and the thousands that should follow with a definite past and an unsure future.

Each individual is a minute part of the world yet each has, is and shall be a life that will contribute some part of himself or herself to this land so that America, "the land of the free" may survive another two hundred years.

May

Earthquakes and storms made headlines in May as both killed hundreds and caused thousands of dollars in damage. An earthquake shook half of Italy and six other European countries, killing over 300. Although many things were damaged the country's famous art treasures survived. Another quake hit Italy three days after the first on May 10 leaving over 800 dead and 150,000 homeless. A week later another quake shook the Soviet Union and was reportedly several times larger than the Italian quakes.

In North Carolina tornadoes, hailstorms and torrential rains bringing floods killed four children and caused an unknown amount of damage to home and crops.

As Reagan and Ford continued to battle it out in primaries, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger announced he will resign no matter who wins the presidential election. The Secretary was one of the major attacks by Ronald Reagan. Reagan went on to defeat Ford in three primaries after trailing behind since the beginning of the primaries.

Ten passengers were killed as the result of a hijacking of a Philippine Airlines jet by six Moslem rebels, three of which were killed on May 22. Twenty-two other persons of the 93 aboard were injured and the plane was a total loss after government troopers opened fire.

The largest scandal to hit West Point in its 174 year history occurred in May when hundreds of cadets in the junior class were accused of cheating. The incident began when an instructor noted similarities in the answers on a take-home exam. Forty-nine were charged by the Honor Committee for cheating while 49 others were exonerated. Cadets then came forward with lists indicating that over 400 cadets had cheated at some time and that the Honor Committee was also in violation of the "respected" code of the academy. The Secretary of the Army was asked to conduct an investigation. Over half of the junior class remained at West Point after graduation. If all were found guilty as charged the cadets faced automatic expulsion.

Tragedy united the small community of Yuba City, California when the high school choir went on a bus trip to nearby San Jose. The bus didn't reach its destination however as it broke through a guard rail and fell 30 feet killing 28 of the 53 students aboard and leaving the others seriously injured. The campus was closed in mourning as students broke down in the halls upon hearing the news. Many of the students were seniors. The tragedy occurred one week before graduation.

Artwork Credits

Copy Credits

Copy on page 41 from the ECU News Bureau, p. 70 from Pat Flynn, p. 89 Sue Ellen McLeod; 110 by Gene Lanier, Chairperson Library Science Department, 194-195 Diane Taylor, 194-202 by Robin Hammond and Virginia Gardner, 378 by Dawn Bledsoe and 379 by Dennis Foster, 223 SGA Bus Accident by Dennis Leonard and 100 by Rudy Howell.

Special thanks to John Evans for writing most of the sports copy and to Sports Information for swimming coverage and the scores.

Information about Greenville (P. 4-8) courtesy of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Information about the Halloween riot (p. 10-11), Title IX (p. 12-13) and graduation (p. 380) came from FOUNTAINHEAD stories.

Much of the academics copy was supplied by interviews with department chairpersons or deans of the various schools. In some departments such as ROTC, History, Geology and Foreign Language and in the Schools of Business, Music and Education faculty members responded to surveys which were sent to all campus departments. As only a few faculty members responded we printed only what we had available.

All other copy was written by either the section editor, a general staffer within the section or the editor.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

AMERICA

May our future surpass the achievements of the past 200 years of freedom!

"I look forward to a great future for America, a future in which our country will match its military strength with our moral restraint, its wealth with our wisdom, its power with our purpose. I look forward to an America which will not be afraid of grace and beauty, which will protect the beauty of our natural environment . . . an America which will reward achievement in the arts as we reward achievement in business or statecraft. . . . I look forward to an America which commands respects throughout the world not only for its strength but for its civilization as well. And I look forward to a world which will be safe not only for democracy and diversity but also for personal distinction."

President John F. Kennedy
Address at Amherst College
October 26, 1963
